PACT IN FORCE, GREECE ASKED TO NAB INSULL

U. S. Legation Formally Enters Application in Appeals Court.

CHICAGOAN EXPECTED TO FIGHT STEP TODAY

Maintains Apparent Calm; Brother, Meanwhile, Wins Delay in Canada.

Athens, Greece, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The American Legation formally applied to the court of appeals today for the extradition of Samuel Insull, who is wanted in Chicago to answer an indictment based on the collapse of his utilities interests. The required documents were presented by the legation to the court.

It was expected that Insull would appear in court tomorrow, accompanied by Christos Ladas, his counsel, to oppose the application.

The formal extradition action was instituted after announcement here and in Washington that an extradition treaty between the two countries became effective with the formal exchange of instruments of ratification.

Appears to Be Calm.

"Well, I'm still free, for the present at least, and I'm going to have tea as usual this afternoon," Insull said when informed of developments. He has been here since October 9, after a hurried departure from Paris the previous week. He left there just after his indictment in Chicago on charges of embezzlement, larceny and larceny by bailee was made public.

American Minister Leland B. Morris called at the ministry of foreign affairs in connection with the Washington request that Insull be detained. He was informed that the question had been referred to the solicitor general of the court of appeals here, who would decide if there were sufficient grounds for the arrest.

In the event the arrest is ordered, the court of appeals will determine whether the Chicagoan is to be extradited under the new treaty.

No New Instructions.

Ladas said he knew nothing more about the matter than was given in published dispatches. He added the police director here had told him no new instructions had been received.

In his speedy trip here, Insull escaped arrest in both France and Italy under provisions of extradition treaties between those countries and the United States. Requests from the United States for his arrest reached capitals of both those nations just a day or two after he had crossed their borders.

Although he was held for investigation a few hours here, attempts by American authorities to have his passport voided failed and he never was under actual arrest.

Signed Some Time Ago.

The Greco-American extradition treaty was signed and ratified in the United States some time ago, but for some unexplained reason the exchange of ratification instruments was delayed, and this prevented immediate extradition of Insull.

During his stay here, he told Greek authorities he had been informed an attempt might be made by American officers to kidnap him. Plain-clothes police were assigned by Greek authorities to accompany him on tours through Greece.

He was feted by business men at luncheons and parties and many expressed sympathy for him. He told

Navy Officer's Death Is Probed

Poison Liquor May Have Proved Fatal to Man in Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Norfolk police and naval authorities today were investigating circumstances surrounding the death of Lieut. Jack W. Ames, U. S. A., 37 years old, whose body was found in a local hotel last night. The officer had been dead nearly twelve hours when discovery by hotel employes who investigated after receiving no response to knocks on the door yesterday and last night.

There were no marks of violence on the body, which was stretched out on a bed, clad in shirt and trousers. Police are awaiting a report on analysis of a small quantity of whisky found in a suitcase beside the bed. The whisky gave off a peculiar odor and it is held possible that death resulted from bad liquor.

Lieut. Ames was on 30 days' leave, which was to have expired today. He was transferred from the West Coast to the naval operating base here in September, and before any special assignment of duties had been made the officer had applied for the month's leave.

Tea House Operator Gets 6-Month Term

Prince Georges Judge Also Fines Leavitt $300; Two Accused in Murder Win Change of Venue to Charles County.

Accompanying the sentence with a searing rebuke, Judge William M. Loker in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday fined Charles Leavitt $300 and sent him to jail for six months for operating the Bladensburg tea house where one man was killed in a gun battle last fall.

Earlier in the day two men charged with murder in connection with the shooting obtained a change of venue in the case, the trial being sent to Charles County. The murder counts probably will be heard on November 28 or during the following week.

Leavitt pleaded guilty to the first count of the indictment charging him with keeping a disorderly house. Addressing him from the bench, Judge Loker said: "You gave a place where men could wallow in the worst corruption possible, bringing shame, sorrow and the utmost disgrace to others. Little baby girls not yet old enough to be taken by men like you cry out to the courts. Thank God there are not many men like you."

The sentence given Leavitt was not the heaviest which might have been levied, the law providing for a maximum of a year in jail and a fine of $500. When his case was called Leavitt's attorney, J. Wilson Ryon, asked for a continuance, as his client's witnesses were not in court. The request was refused when the court learned that the witnesses were not in the jurisdiction.

There were four counts in the indictment against Leavitt, the first charging him with keeping a disorderly house, and the others charging him with maintaining one, setting up one, and receiving profits from one. The guilty plea on the first count automatically clears him on

LAWYER GIVEN LIFE IN MOTHER'S DEATH

Insanity Plea Fails to Save Birmingham Matricide, Who Sought Estate.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—John R. Boyle, whose own defense alienists described him as a man centered on "self," was convicted today of murdering his mother, under whose will he was chief beneficiary. Punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

Mrs. Jessie Boyle, 66, was slain on Shades Mountain, near here, last June. Boyle, socially prominent attorney, reported her death and claimed she was murdered by a highwayman as they picked wild flowers. He exhibited superficial wounds, which he said the robber inflicted on him after Mrs. Boyle had been slain and thrown over a cliff.

The court left open to the jury verdicts of acquittal on the evidence, acquittal by reason of insanity, and guilty of various degrees of homicide. The trial began October 24. Alienists testified Boyle was "ego-eccentric," that his whole life centered around "self," and that he suffered from a form of paranoia.

The State introduced voluminous testimony concerning the circumstances surrounding the slaying, and had the will of Mrs. Boyle, under which her son was sole executor and chief beneficiary, read to the jury.

Gen. Sandino Names Provisional President

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Word from the headquarters of Augustino Sandino, Nicaraguan insurgent leader, said today the general had announced establishment of an autonomous government on October 23, with Gen. Juan Gregorio Colindres as provisional president.

This executive by Sandino's order has jurisdiction over all the territory which the insurgent commander controls. The regime will ignore next Sunday's Nicaraguan election, will oppose its results, and will call an election of its own.

TROUBLE THREATENS IN SCOTTSBORO CASE

Labor Defense Is Planning to Defy Edict Against Court Picketing.

The possibility of disorder at the doors of the United States Supreme Court appeared likely last night after the International Labor Defense announced it would defy the edict of Capitol authorities and attempt a demonstration when a decision in the Scottsboro case is handed down.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to announce on Monday a decision on the appeal of seven Negroes, convicted of an assault on two white girls, although it is possible that the decision will not be given on Monday.

Capt. Stephen J. Gnash, of the Capitol Police refused yesterday to permit the picketing of the court. Frank Spector, representing the International Labor Defense, said regardless of the prohibition the picketing would take place.

Spector said he wanted to have picketers parade, carring placards reading: "Free the Scottsboro Boys." The head of the Capitol Police said "That might be interpreted as an attempt to coerce the Supreme Court."

The flag of the International Labor Defense leader, Capt. Gnash said, was not the American flag because Spector was a Communist.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" Spector asked.

"We'll be here to meet you," Gnash replied.

The head of the Capitol Police said he would have 50 men available to repel any attempt to violate the law. In the event more men are necessary, he said, he will call on the Metropolitan Police for assistance.

Cashier and Family Held Captive; Bank Robbed

Marienville, Pa., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Six bandits robbed the Gold Standard National Bank here of $7,500 in cash after holding the cashier, F. R. Johnson, his wife and daughter and a friend prisoner in the Johnson apartment over the bank all night.

Jobless Father of 9 Held In Threat on Mrs. Morrow

Carpenter Said to Admit Sending Letter to Senator's Widow After Appeals for Money Had Been Refused; Prosecution to Be Pushed.

Boston, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—An unemployed carpenter, father of nine children, was arrested today by postal inspectors who charged him with sending a threatening letter to Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, widow of the United States Senator and mother of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The man under arrest, Charles C. Jodrey, 55, was held in East Cambridge Jail in default of $5,000 bail. Park D. Colvin, postal inspector for New England, said he would present the case before a Federal grand jury as soon as possible.

Postal inspectors said Jodrey sent at least two letters to Mrs. Morrow, in which he said he had lost his life savings and appealed for financial assistance. Mrs. Morrow replied, expressing sympathy but explained she could not help everyone.

On October 12, the Federal officials said, an annonymous letter was mailed from somewhere in Greater Boston to Mrs. Morrow at her Englewood, N. J., home. This letter demanded money and threatened harm to Mrs. Morrow if the demand was ignored.

Mrs. Morrow reported the matter to postal authorities, the letter was sent to Washington, and then to Boston where two postal inspectors were detailed to the investigation. A comparison of the anonymous letter with the two signed by Jodrey convinced the inspectors that the handwriting was the same and Jodrey's arrest followed.

Jodrey was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney and held in $5,000 for hearing in Federal Court Wednesday although Assistant United States Attorney Haven Parker suggested he be given a mental examination.

Colvin said Jodrey admitted sending all three letters, but insisted he had no intention of carrying out his threat to harm Mrs. Morrow or members of her family.

"This is a very serious case," Colvin said. He added he would seek a Federal indictment under the recent Federal statute enacted after the kidnaping and slaying of Mrs. Morrow's grandson, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr.

Jodrey, said to have been unemployed for two years, has had a good reputation in Everett, where he resides.

HERRIOT SHUNS DEBTS' TOPIC IN PARTY ADDRESS

SAYS HOOVER PLAN NEEDS DEEP STUDY

Bergery Is Whistled Down on Urging Cancellation of Obligations.

Toulouse, France, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Responding to criticism by minority spokesmen, Premier Edouard Herriot vigorously defended his budget and disarmament policies tonight before the convention of his Radical Socialist party and was accorded what amounted to a unanimous vote of indorsement.

The premier's speech had not been scheduled. He took the floor after Deputy Gaston Bergery, one of the leaders of the militant wing of the party, had declared that "no one in the world thinks any longer that intergovernmental debts will be paid" and had accused the French government of failing to give a proper reception to the Hoover disarmament plan.

The Hoover plan, the premier replied, required deep study—a fact appreciated by the American disarmament delegates themselves, with whom the French worked "continually in amicable collaboration."

General Policies Adopted.

He defended the new arms plan France is presenting at Geneva and declared that the government would not dissociate security from disarmament. There was no mention of war debts in his speech.

The party platform of general policies was adopted unanimously, an action regarded as complete indorsement of the Herriot ministry.

The opening session of the four-day convention was called to order late in the day while more than 1,000 delegates awaited the arrival of their leader from Spain.

Yvon Delbos, vice president of the Chamber of Deputies and former minister, opened the meeting by reading a report which outlined the party's platform.

Balancing of Budget.

It called for balancing the budget by sound financial means, including vigorous economy and reduction of military expenses without compromising the country's safety, world organization for peace assuring security to all nations on the base and spirit of the League of Nations and moral and material disarmament under control of the League of Nations.

"No one in the world thinks any longer that intergovernmental debts will be paid," declared Deputy Gaston Bergery during a debate on general policy.

"I can make this declaration, not being minister, since it engages only me. There is not a deputy in France or England who would vote tomorrow for any payment whatever to the United States without a corresponding payment being received from Germany," said Bergery. "I regret that at Lausanne our government did not declare for a general annulment of these debts," he added. His remarks drew whistles in the French manner of protest.

Man Is Seized in Theft Of $30,000 Last Year

William Henry McDowell, of 5034 Conduit road northwest, was arrested last night by Detective Sergt. Harold Johnson on a warrant issued in Baltimore on December 31, 1931, charging him with absconding with $30,000.

The warrant was sworn out by Mrs. Johanna M. Jung, of Baltimore, and charged the money had been given McDowell to finance a business, in various sums during 1929, 1930 and 1931. Detectives said McDowell admitted the woman had given him $4,000 to set himself up in business as a contractor, but denied defrauding the woman of $30,000. He will not fight extradition, he told local police.

ROOSEVELT INVITES REPUBLICANS TO AID HIM IN RECOVERY PROGRAM; YOUNG BACKS DEMOCRATIC TICKET AND ATTACKS CAMPAIGN OF FEAR

Indorses Lehman And Wagner In Speech.

Urges Confidence in Future Regardless of Who Wins.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Owen D. Young, in calling tonight for the election of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket, told a political rally: "I am not afraid of mobs if Mr. Hoover is elected, and I am not afraid of markets and business if Mr. Roosevelt is elected."

He also declared, "It is time liberal parties came into power to save conservatives from their own destruction, and to save the rest of us who are victims, too."

The prominent industrialist spoke on the same program with the governor at a meeting arranged by the Republicans-for-Roosevelt League.

Without Qualification.

He said there had been "some misrepresentation of my silence in this campaign," and added he welcomed the opportunity of appearing with the governor," and saying what will not be news to him or to the President of the United States—that I am supporting without qualification Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner."

He also said he was supporting Herbert H. Lehman for election as governor and U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner for reelection. Both are Democrats.

"Let that definite statement," he continued, "end any speculation as to where I stand."

Interrupted by Applause.

Applause sweeping down from the five floors of the opera house interrupted as the industrial leader said:

"It is no time to make threats. I am happy to say that Gov. Roosevelt and the Democratic party had not held up the specter of what might happen by war of social disturbances if he, as the representative of the liberal party, were not elected."

A voice from a gallery shouted:

"Owen D. Young, Secretary of State."

Roosevelt smiled, throwing back his head.

"Even the President and the Secretary of the Treasury will, I think, not deny me the right, even as a raw recruit, to express a view on markets and on business," said Young. The reference to Secretary Mills brought boos from some of the crowd.

Expresses Confidence.

"So let us be done with fear. Let us rest assured that voting as we feel will bring a result, which we can look forward to with confidence and optimism, the morning following the election.

"Mobs and markets both will then know that there has been a free expression by the voters of America, and I know of no more steadying influence for both."

5 Die in Richmond Train-Auto Crash

All Victims Are Women; Eyewitness States Car Stalled.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—A train-automobile crash took a toll of five lives at the Richmond City limits today. All five of the victims were women.

They were Mrs. W. H. Lane, 40; Mrs. E. R. Mitze, 30; Miss Mary Stone, 17; Mrs. A. H. Henley, 45, and Miss Florence Henley, 18, all residents of Laurel, a Richmond suburb.

W. H. Hall, an eyewitness, said the train dragged the wreckage of the automobile a quarter of a mile down the track, after striking it at a road crossing. The train was No. 89, Atlantic Coast Line southbound from New York to Jacksonville. Engineer R. L. Fox was quoted as saying that apparently the car stalled on the tracks. Coroner A. P. Trayman, of Henrico County, immediately started an investigation.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE HEAD WEST

Hoover Again Speeds West on 2-Day Drive

Cheered on Brief Stops in Maryland and West Virginia; 12 Talks Today Will Include Two Major Addresses.

On Board Presidential Special, En Route to Springfield, Ill., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Speeding westward on a final campaign tour, with California and election day his goal, President Hoover tonight talked with railroad station crowds as preparation for two days of campaigning before beginning his direct West Coast dash.

President Hoover's aids decided late tonight upon a campaign route to the West Coast that would carry his special train into Omaha, Nebr., next Sunday morning and on through Denver and Salt Lake City to Palo Alto, Calif.

For hours after the presidential special left Washington, Mr. Hoover's secretaries pored over schedules to determine the best itinerary to follow from St. Paul, where he speaks Saturday night. Until close to midnight word was given out that all plans were "indefinite."

It was also definitely announced that the Chief Executive would stop off somewhere Monday night to broadcast a final appeal for votes in Tuesday's elections. The spot for this radio speech, however, has not yet been chosen.

At Cumberland, Md., two hours after dark, the Chief Executive shook hands with several welcomers and responded with a smile to a cheer from a police-estimated crowd of 2,000. The President did not deliver a speech, saying he had been making many in recent days.

Tomorrow he is scheduled to make more than a dozen political speeches with principal addresses at Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis, before continuing on to discussions of major issues at Madison, Wis., and St. Paul on Saturday.

Lady Nancy Astor Arrives for Visit

She Refuses to Talk About American Politics on Eve of Election.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Lady Nancy Astor, member of the British Parliament, arrived on the liner Leviathan today, accompanied by her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Brand.

They planned to visit Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Lady Astor's sister, here for a day and then go to Mirador, the Virginia homestead of the Langhorne family, where Lady Astor was born and spent her childhood.

Lady Astor observed that she had so timed her visit to America as to be here in advance of the Presidential elections. However, she declined to discuss American politics or prohibition.

Truckmen Ask Injunction In 2-State License War

Pennsylvania Drivers Seek Order of Camden Court to Prevent Interference as New Jersey Official Blames Keystone State for Dispute.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The Pennsylvania-New Jersey motor truck war, which has involved all neighboring States and threatened trouble in a number of others, tomorrow will be carried into the Federal court.

Harold G. Hoffman, New Jersey commissioner of motor vehicles, late today was served with notice that truck owners will apply to Judge J. Boyd Avis, in the United States District Court at Camden, N. J., for an injunction to restrain his agents from interfering with movements of trucks from Pennsylvania.

Officials of the Camden Rail and Harbor Terminal Corporation and certain farm truckmen moved, through attorneys, to secure the injunction.

Hoffman declared that since the attorney general of New Jersey is in Newark and could not prepare an answer to the case in a single day he would seek a postponement.

Meanwhile, at Harrisburg, Leon D. Metzger, secretray of revenue, warned that all New Jersey trucks must obtain Pennsylvania license tags to enter Pennsylvania after 8 o'clock tomorrow night unless New Jersey in the meantime modifies its order on trucks from this Sttae.

"This action is in no sense retaliatory or in the nature of a reprisal," Metzger said. "For three days Pennsylvania has granted privileges not reciprocated by New Jersey.

"Pennsylvania regrets having to take this action. We have been patient in the hope that the New Jersey authorities would reconsider their action requiring all Pennsylvania commercial motor vehicles to secure New Jersey registration. New Jersey has not done this.

"We dislike putting New Jersey farmers and New Jersey truckers of their own property to extra expense and inconvenience, but New Jersey has shown no consideration for the Pennsylvania farmer or private trucker. The responsibility rests with the New Jersey authorities."

Culminating a three-day controversy between the two States, Pennsylvania officials tonight are awaiting official word from New Jersey authorities hoping that New Jersey would take a position corresponding to that of Maryland, Delaware, New York, West Virginia and Ohio.

Is Cheered Wildly In New York Address.

Feels He Could Best Hoover in Contacts With Congress.

Metropolitan Opera House, New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—From the focal point of opera's famous golden horseshoe, Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight addressed an invitation to Republicans to join the Democrats in working out the program he said had been designed to the end that the American people might have work and security. He spoke to the Republicans-for-Roosevelt League.

The appearance of the candidate precipitated a 3-minute demonstration that brought paper tumbling down from the high upper galleries to sprinkle the bare shoulders of women in evening gowns in the plush-lined boxes below.

He had come to the Opera House from two of the most spectacular demonstrations he has been since he opened his campaign with his flying trip to Chicago last June.

Cheered by Thousands.

In City Hall Square in Newark and in Journal Square in Jersey City, many thousands had gathered in a cheering throng to see the candidate while there was a steady rumble of bursting bombs and rockets sent colored flames showering across the sky. The candidate rode in an open car through the crowd that pushed hard against police lines and came to the very fenders of his automobile. He swept quickly back through the Holland tunnels for his speech in the Opera House.

Mr. Roosevelt told the crowd at the Metropolitan that the President was conducting a campaign of fear and quoted Mr. Hoover as saying that the grass would grow in the streets of American cities if the policies he advocated were not continued.

"Well, the grass has little chance to grow in the streets of our cities now," he added. "It would be trampled into the ground by the men who wander these streets in search of employment."

Reiterates His Policies.

He outlined anew some of the policies he has laid down in previous speeches and said he felt that he could get along better with Congress than Mr. Hoover had been able to do.

The speech was the first of three he will make in the New York City area. He will appear with Alfred E. Smith tomorrow night in Brooklyn and on the following night in Madison Square Garden.

As he went ahead with his story of his work with the New York Legislature, Mr. Roosevelt departed from his text.

Referring to disputes between them he said that "in all these cases we

British Jobless Ready To Quit London Zone

London, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Unemployed, leaderless thousands, who besieged London during the last eight days, apparently have conceded defeat of their plan to protest forcibly the "means test" before the House of Commons.

Leaders of the British "hunger march" agreed with the city's public assistance officials, it was learned, that the jobless men and women will leave as soon as railroad fares can be raised. Peaceful demonstrations will be held Friday and Saturday nights, in an effort to raise the money. The hunger marchers will begin leaving at once thereafter.

PHILADELPHIA HEARS GLASSFORD ON B.E.F.

Administration Is Termed Intolerant in Policies Toward Marchers.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, former police superintendent in Washington, D. C., in a speech here tonight said there had been no serious difficulties with "bonus marchers" for nearly two months last summer "until the satellites of an intolerant and shortsighted administration saw fit to repudiate everything that had been done and to take matters in their own hands."

Addressing a veterans' rally, he said he was through with public life. He told of events connected with the forcible eviction of bonus marchers from the Capital in July.

In the address, as given out by his secretary, Glassford, who later resigned, said he had been "criticized in administrative circles" for too much leniency toward the marchers but said that "in this policy I had taken a leaf from the book of Mr. Herbert Hoover in the humanitarian relief work he accomplished in Belgium and Russia."

"It is not my intention to make a political speech," he said. "I am not in politics. I am neither a Democrat, a Republican, a Socialist, nor a Communist. I am not looking for a political job, nor do I seek further activities in the field of public life."

Glassford said he knew "that for weeks troops had been held in readiness and given special training for this episode," and that he was "astonished that the administration which has the problem of solving a serious Nation-wide economic problem applicable to 120,000,000 people should acknowledge its inability to solve this relatively insignificant one of less than 8,000 destitute veterans by running them out of the District of Columbia at the point of the bayonet."

Glassford denied that there was an extraordinary proportion of criminal, Communist and nonveteran elements among the bonus marchers.

Glassford said the veterans "knew better" when "it was alleged by the administration that the partly demolished buildings" in the Pennsylvania avenue camp area had to be torn down to make way for construction, and added it was found that the Commissioners in issuing this order (for evacuation) had not consulted legal authority."

Hyde Says Roosevelt Too Unsound for Job

Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt was described as "too unsound and impracticable to be entrusted with the Presidency" in an address here tonight by Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

"The governor now says practical reforestation is in its origin an act of nature not of man," Hyde said. "He now says the winds of the heavens carry the seeds from trees that have come to maturity, scatter them over the ground and the warm earth and the rain and the sun do the rest. I do not mean to be cruel, but the governor forgets that his original plan was to relieve unemployment. Now he turns the job over to Mother Nature.

Capital Contract Bridge Tournament Is Started

The second annual contract bridge tournament of the Washington Bridge League opened yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel. There were 62 players entered in the first round of the pair championship, which was won by George C. Hill, 4019 Eighteenth northwest, and Harry T. Winsell, 113 West Thornapple street northwest.

The tournament will continue through today and tomorrow, with the pair championships being played in the afternoon, and the team championships at night.

Norris Denounces Party Regularity

Nebraska Senator Also Urges Direct Election of President.

San Francisco, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Party regularity for its own sake was condemned by United States Senator George W. Norris, Independent Republican of Nebraska, in a political address here tonight in behalf of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Senator Norris also pleaded for direct election of the President and Vice President as a means of freeing the national Government from control by "political machines."

At Oakland earlier today Senator Norris had said that in his address tonight he would present evidence supporting his allegations of attempts by "large corporations," to "frighten and intimidate" citizens into voting for Hoover. He announced he had asked Senate investigation of such alleged attempts.

Copies of the prepared text of the address, however, made no mention of the matter. It was devoted wholly to the topics of party regularity, the electoral college, and the two major party candidates.

Perjury Admitted By Store Seller

Confectionery Man Pleads Guilty to Falsifying List of Creditors.

The first conviction on perjury charges under the 26-year-old "sales in bulk" law in Criminal Court, No. 1, yesterday may pave the way to the saving of thousands of dollars yearly by the city's wholesale merchants.

Violation of the law, merchants say, causes them great losses. The statute requires that the seller of a business make a sworn list of his creditors before consummation of the sale. Through this affidavit, the creditor is afforded protection.

The case in court was that of Raffale Presutti, who sold a confectionary and stock. He was alleged to have omitted certain creditors in an affidavit sworn to by him. He entered a plea of guilty and his case was referred to the probation officer.

Revenue Bureau Hears Chest Plea.

The employes of the Bureau of Internal Revenue yesterday assembled in their auditorium to hear a speech on the Community Chest delivered by Linn C. Drake, a volunteer Community Chest speaker. Commissioner of Internal Revenue David Burnet spoke briefly.

Glassford Letter on Bonus Emergency Is Disclosed

Secret Communication to Commissioners Warned of Expected Disturbances and Advised That Troops Be Kept Ready to Cope With Situation.

Evidence that Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford had recommended that the District Commissioners be prepared to "declare an emergency" and provide for the use of the National Guard or the Regular Army if necessary in quelling expected disturbances in the bonus expeditionary force was made public late yesterday by Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the board.

Photostatic copies of a secret communication addressed to the Commissioners and signed by Gen. Glassford as superintendent of police were released to the press together with a short typewritten statement through Corporation Counsel William W. Bride. Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, Police Commissioner, was out of the city, having left for Fort Leavenworth early yesterday.

The statement explained that the communication, dated June 3, made it appear "that as early as that date Gen. Glassford was of the opinion that an emergency might arise with respect to the presence in the District of the bonus expeditionary force, as to necessitate the use of the National Guard or the Federal troops, and he feared such a situation was imminent."

Neither the statement nor the communication referred, however, to the major point of the controversy that arose almost two months ago: whether Gen. Glassford asked the Commissioners to ask the President to call troops and evict the veterans.

The date of the Glassford letter is just prior to the date set by the police head and the Commissioners for the veterans to quit the Capital. Trucks were to be provided on June 9 to carry the service men as far as 50 miles out of the city, and relief was to be ended after that time. The veterans, however, refused to leave.

The major part of Gen. Glassford's letter dealt with the status of the bonus army as of June 3. It then stated:

"Although no disorders have occured, the plan of the Police Department is to assemble all disaffected groups at Anacostia Park and should emergency arise to hold the Eleventh Street Bridge against a riotous invasion across the Anacostia River. Plans and preparations are being made to this end, including plans for the use of tear gas; at the same time a force of police will be held in readiness on the east side of Anacostia River in order to localize any riot that may occur, and to prevent access to the bridges further north.

"As soon as funds available have been exhausted and no more food can be furnished by this department we believe that an emergency situation will exist. Such a situation may develop as early as noon tomorrow.

"Recommendation: That preparations be made by the Commissioners to declare an emergency, and to provide for the use of the National Guard, or to place in effect 'the White Plan.'"

The communication is marked secret.

Dr. Reichelderfer's statement had this explanation to make of the "White Plan."

"The 'White Plan' referred to by Gen. Glassford is the official designation of the War Department of the plan to be followed by the Regular Army in the quelling of serious internal disorder. It is only applied under critical conditions when civil authority and all other normal sources of protection have failed. Gen. Glassford was undoubtedly familiar with its general provisions and the seriousness of the situation which it envisioned."

Dr. Reichelderfer flatly refused to amplify the statement or to answer any questions regarding it. Corporation Counsel Bride called at the White House early yesterday and had a long conference with Lawrence Richey, President Hoover's secretary. Mr. Bride explained that his mission was solely to acquaint Mr. Hoover with the Glassford communication.

Several affidavits were taken yesterday by Mr. Bride from police officials, among them Inspector Edwards, but these were not made public.

The time of the release of the statement was changed several times. It finally was given to the press a few minutes after 6 o'clock.

Citizens' Group Scores Glassford Bonus Stand

Approval of the administration's course in using troops to evict the bonus marchers last summer and sharp disagreement with criticisms being expressed by former Superintendent of Police Pelham D. Glassford in a series of newspaper articles is expressed in a letter to President Hoover from Demarest Lloyd, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, made public here yesterday.

This letter, which recites that it is in accord with a unanimous vote of the association's executive committee at its last meeting, brings out that Glassford's attempt to play a dual role, that of head of police, and spokesman for the bonus marchers automatically incapacitated him from handling the situation effectively when it became acute in accordance with the time-honored rule that one can not "serve two masters." The use of troops, it is pointed out, was only resorted to after agents of the Treasury had been defied and the police, including Gen. Glassford himself, attacked.

The conclusion is that the Federal Government handled the problem in the only effective way and that it is therefore entitled to the gratitude of all citizens.

CANNON, IN ALABAMA, ASKS G. O. P. VICTORY

Bishop "Totally Disagrees" With Hoover but Urges Roosevelt's Defeat.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Bishop James Cannon, jr., told the North Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South tonight that he would vote for President Hoover "as the only way to defeat Roosevelt."

The dry leader, who four years ago was active in the anti-Smith campaign in the South, said that in casting his vote for Mr. Hoover this time he wanted it understood he "totally disagreed" with some of the President's statements; felt that "he has not done all that he could have done to make prohibition effective," and considered his modification plan "vague" and "impractical."

Bishop Cannon, discussing the entry of Alfred E. Smith, Democratic nominee in 1928, into the campaign, said his Newark speech "was a deliberate, carefully prepared, direct attack upon the moral and religious forces behind the eighteenth amendment."

"Outburst of Smith Spleen."

"In order to whip into line sullen, resentful Smith idolators, Smith deliberately injected the religious issue into the political campaign. * * * He denounced opposition to his candidacy in 1928 as 'bigotry' and not prohibition, and then openly denounced 'Methodists' and others as an 'aggregation of bigots,'" the bishop said.

Bishop Cannon said in his Boston speech Smith's statement regarding Methodists was "a malicious outburst of Smith spleen, pent up for years, which demands a flat denial."

The "final line-up" of the elements supporting Gov. Roosevelt, Bishop Cannon said, "added to his own record and position, has become decisive in determining how many dry Democrats will vote."

Question of Sincerity.

"I can not possibly vote for Roosevelt with such an openly declared position against the eighteenth amendment and with such an aggregation on the firing line in his campaign," said the bishop.

"Therefore, although I am not a Republican, I shall vote for Mr. Hoover as the only way to defeat Roosevelt.

"But in voting for Mr. Hoover, it will be with a distinct, clear-cut declaration that I totally disagree with certain statements in his acceptance speech. Without calling in question his sincerity, I can not agree that he has done all that he could have done to make prohibition effective. At the very beginning of his administration he should have called upon Congress to provide whatever money and men might be enecessary, and Congress would undoubtedly have given him whatever he asked."

Big Halloween Parade Planned for Next Year

Success of this year's Halloween parade has encouraged the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade to plan to repeat the event next year.

A. K. Shipe, an official of the trade body committee this year, said that next year's parade will be "even bigger and better," and that greater facilities would be supplied for handling the throngs of spectators and paraders.

FURLOUGHS SLATED FOR 36 AT NAVY YARD

Wives of All but Two to Be Released This Month Work for U. S.

Thirty-six navy yard machinists and miscellaneous workers will be placed on indefinite payless furloughs this month by the Washington Navy Yard. All but two are married men, whose wives are Government employes.

Capt. Edward G. Kintner, Navy Department's chief of the Navy Yard division, said the situation here is apparently unique. Although employment varies at different yards throughout the country, none of the others are letting out workers at this time, he said.

The Navy Yard Local, of the International Association of Machinists took up the matter at a meeting Wednesday night, but failed to decide on a course of action. It was argued that if these 36 were not furloughed, others whose wives did not have jobs would be open to release.

Under the economy act, men who have wives in the Government service must be separated from the service before others are affected. The Washington yard plans to furlough 5 miscellaneous workers November 13, 21 machinists November 15, and 10 more November 20. Two sheet-metal workers who are not married will be let out. If work picks up the men will be recalled.

Business Firms In Safety Drive

Suggestion by Police on Crime Prevention Is Being Followed.

Numerous business establishments and banks throughout the city have signified their intention of installing devices designed to thwart holdups and other criminal projects.

Cooperating with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, business men and bankers are arranging for installation of burglar alarms and tear-gas spraying systems of the latest type. A large squad of policemen and detectives are busy canvassing the city's business houses and financial institutions discussing ways and means of making the firms as crime-proof as possible.

Preceding the campaign Inspector F. S. W. Burke, detective chief, wrote executives of a number of banks, urging their cooperation in making holdup and robbery projects difficult, taken him.

In an effort to stop petty thievery, housebreaking and pilfering in Washington, police yesterday launched a drive against idle persons, known to be without any means of subsistence.

About fifteen persons were arrested and held for investigation in several precincts.

DEMOCRATS SCORED BY MRS. LONGWORTH

Cincinnati, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, in a Republican campaign speech, tonight declared the Democrats "belittle the intelligence of the average citizen."

"And I," she added, "as an average citizen, resent it."

The daughter of the late President Roosevelt and widow of Speaker Longworth, in a radio talk, also said:

"I should think they (the Democrats) would be mortified by the concentrated and continuous propaganda designed to persuade the people that Mr. Hoover produced the depression and, by his actions or inactions, has prolonged it.

"I have seen many instances of unfairness in political campaigns, and I do not suppose any one with any knowledge of politics expects scrupulous fairness in the heat of a battle for the Presidency.

"However, so far as I can recollect, the three-year effort of the Democratic party to saddle Mr. Hoover with complete responsibility for everything that has happened since 1929, takes first rank among samples of conscious and unscrupulous partisan dishonesty.

"The second thing that I think will stand out when we look back on this campaign is the amazing way in which the Democrats have ignored their own record. * * *

"When you consider this record, the promises and pledges that they now make with such prodigal abandon for campaign purposes seem fantastic and absurd. * * *

"This year we face a test. Are we truly free—free from prejudice, from resentment, from blind bitterness? Free within ourselves to cast our vote with patriotism, with intelligence, with faith? If we are, we will vote for Herbert Hoover."

Democrat Claims G.O.P. Postmaster Held Mail

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Alleged rating up of Democratic campaign literature from fourth class mail to first class, and the subsequent increase in postage from 72 cents to $28.32, at the receiving postoffice today, drew Democratic fire from the Virginia capital.

State Senator John H. Wicker, jr., who sent the literature through the Richmond postoffice without question, accused Postmaster Garland, at Warsaw, Va., of "skullduggery" in delaying delivery, "when the pamphlets would be very effective near the end of the campaign."

Garland said the parcel was sealed and was not marked "fourth class mail."

HOOVER OFF TO WEST ON INTENSIVE DRIVE

until today that you were coming," called a spokesman for the group, as the presidential train stopped.

"That's all right," Mr. Hoover replied, smiling, "are things coming along all right?"

"Fine," came the reply. "We are going to carry the county."

"How'd you enjoy those apples?" called some one else, referring to a big basket of fruit given to the President at Martinsburg last week on his return trip from Indianapolis.

"They were enormous," the President replied, "and I've had one for breakfast every morning."

"The sheriff over there," said the spokesman, pointing, "gave you those apples. We were going to give you some Winesaps this time but we thought they weren't quite good enough."

Before his train pulled out, the Chief Executive leaned over the rear platform to shake hands with Charles Fine, who said he was "about 70 years old and a voter for President Hoover."

At Greenspring, a watering stop, a small crowd gathered around the rear of the train, and Mrs. Hoover appeared in place of the President, who was at dinner.

She chatted with the group, but when one of the men expressed disappointment that Mr. Hoover had not appeared, he got up from the dinner table in time to wave to them and receive a cheer as the train pulled out.

Given Send-Off Here.

The President and Mrs. Hoover were given a send-off of applause this afternoon as they went through the National Capital's Union Station, just before their special train departed at 4:20 p. m.

Three of Mr. Hoover's secretaries, Walter H. Newton, Lawrence Richey and French Strother, along with Henry Allen, publicity director of the Republican campaign, made up the President's immediate party.

Along with them went more than a score of newspapermen and photographers, a heavy squad of Secret Service agents and a detail of stenographers and mimeograph experts who will turn out campaign speeches en route.

There will be little rest for the President on Saturday, with eleven speeches scheduled, including major addresses at Madison, Wis., in the afternoon and St. Paul in the evening.

Gets Cordial Send-Off.

A group of Government officials and personal friends were in the presidential waiting room at the station. The Chief Executive shook hands with all and received their good wishes for his trip.

Included were Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army; Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and Mrs. Pratt; Solicitor General and Mrs. Thomas Thacher and Brig. Gen Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator.

Boarding the observation platform of the nine-car special train, the President and Mrs. Hoover paused for photographs and shook hands with a few of those closest to the train. The President smiled and waved his hat to the group, which applauded again as the train pulled out.

Works on Final Drive.

Before boarding his train in Washington, Mr. Hoover today closeted himself in the White House study for a steady drive of preparation for the intensive campaign days to come.

Almost the only interlude in Mr. Hoover's workday was a scene arranged on the curving south portico of the Executive Mansion during which John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, enrolled him as the first member in this year's roll call.

"The Red Cross is facing its greatest peace time emergency in relief work for unemployed and others," Judge Payne said. "It needs a greatly increased membership."

FARLEY FORECASTS 10,000,000 MARGIN

Says Roosevelt Has Chance to Carry 48 States in Final Analysis.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—In more than 30 of the 48 States, Democratic Chairman James A. Farley predicted tonight, Gov. Roosevelt's majority on election day will be more than President Hoover's total vote.

"I predict a great and triumphal victory," the national campaign manager said in what he described as his "final analysis of the situation."

"Gov. Roosevelt will place a new record into American political annals for posterity to marvel at.

"We need not go beyond the Literary Digest's plain figures of what is going to happen next Tuesday."

In the formal statement he handed out at national headquarters, Farley listed four predictions he has made at various times since the Chicago conventions, and said he still "stands by them."

They are:

"1. That Gov. Roosevelt has a chance to carry every State in the union.

"2. That his popular majority will be 10,000,000 votes.

"3. That in at least one State he will have a plurality of 1,000,000 votes.

"4. That the Republican party is going to sink to the lowest estate it has experienced in a two-party contest since the Civil War."

Ogden Mills' Chauffeur Ends Life in New York

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The body of Frederick White, second chauffeur in the employ of Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, was found early today in the basement of the Mills garage on West Fifty-second street. There was a bullet hole in his head, and a pistol, from which a single shot had been fired, beside the body.

The medical examiner's office listed the death as suicide. White had been drinking heavily, police were told, and brooding over the death three years ago of his wife. The body was found by Joseph Wisemann, first chauffeur, who shared quarters with White on the third floor.

ROOSEVELT LEADING IN 41 STATES' VOTE

Literary Digest Straw Poll Shows New England and Jersey for Hoover.

New York, Nov. 3.—The Literary Digest announced tonight that on the basis of final returns in its presidential poll, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, is leading President Herbert Hoover in 41 States, with a total popular vote of 1,715,789, in comparison with 1,150,398 for Hoover. The electoral vote is divided as follows: Roosevelt, 474; Hoover, 57.

"A grand total of 3,064,497 ballots were returned and tabulated. Of these, 1,715,789, or 55.99 per cent, are for Roosevelt; 1,150,398, or 37.53 per cent voted for Hoover, and 148,079, or 4.84 per cent supported Thomas.

Hoover shows a slight gain from the 37.33 per cent of the total vote which he had in the semifinal returns and the 37.19 per cent for him in the quarter-final returns, which latter tabulation was the first to contain ballots from all 48 States.

"The final vote gives Hoover a lead in the seven States of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Jersey.

"Roosevelt leads his Republican rival in all of the other 41 States.

Jahncke Deplores Democratic Policy

Bostonians Are Told House Was "Milling Mob" in Last Session.

Boston, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The Democratic party was accused tonight by Ernest L. Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, of depending upon "deception, demagoguery and depression" for victory in next week's national election.

Jahncke told a meeting of the John Ericsson League in Faneuil Hall that the "truth of the matter is that the Democrats do not believe they need to present a program." They are depending, he said, "for victory upon the fire of discontent growing out of the depression."

The record of the Democratic majority in the House of last Congress was assailed by Jahncke, who said, "We saw a millin; mob of Democrats who were characterized by their own leader, Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, as Communists; who were told by another Democratic leader, Representative Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, that they were destroying their country."

Costello Predicts Roosevelt Victory

District Leader Also Says Democrats Will Win House and Senate.

The election of Gov. Roosevelt and Democratic majorities in the House and Senate were forecast last night by John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for the District, at a war veteran's rally in Democratic headquarters, 1320 G street northwest.

Martin A. Beehan, executive secretary of the War Veterans Democratic Club, said the defeat of President Hoover is inevitable "due to the rising tide of unemployment and the favoritism shown by the administration to the sinister financial interests."

Other speakers were Joseph A. Donovan, John W. Crane and Miss Etta Taggart. Ralph Cusick, attorney, presided.

Republican-Roosevelt Headquarters Attacked

Los Angeles, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Police reported today that four men raided the West Seventh street headquarters of the Republican Roosevelt-Garner League today, attacked Dr. J. A. Breauxes, manager, injuring his arm, smashed signs and furniture and tore up all printed political matter in the offices.

Officers said here Breauxes told them the same men damaged a radio in front of the offices Tuesday night and destroyed a quantity of Roosevelt-Garner stickers. No arrests had been made.

AMERICAN ELECTION INTERESTS EUROPE

Hopes of Nations Regarding U. S. Foreign Policy Will Change Little If Any.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

London, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Seldom has Europe taken such keen interest in an American presidential election as this year, a survey of official and editorial opinion gathered by correspondents of the Associated Press in European capitals showed.

The issues and dramatic features of the contest between President Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt have supplanted news of America's gangsters, moving picture stars and divorce trials.

Regardless of who goes to the White House on March 4, Europe's hopes and desires regarding American foreign policy will remain much as they are, it was indicated. These hopes and desires are:

1. Cancellation or drastic revision of World War debts.

2. Disarmament if it can be achieved.

3. A successful world economic conference.

4. Settlement of the Far Eastern situation.

5. Russia has a special hope of recognition of its existence.

Fate of Dry Law.

6. All eyes are turned on the fate of the prohibition law; Britain hopes her distilleries will be revived, France hopes her wine industry will boom, Germany wants to recover her great American beer market. Italy alone takes the view that America may be able to supply her own wine needs from California.

For the first four of these aspirations, Europe expects American participation in world council no matter who is elected.

In Great Britain, the press is watching the campaign closely, while in France no American election ever commanded such attention from the general public. Leading Paris newspapers daily carry long cables from special correspondents sent to America. Paul Reynaud, former minister of justice, cabled the newspaper Excelsior his deep impressions of the generosity of the American people in the face of the unemployment crisis and of their discipline and sense of political stability.

Prohibition, Debts and Arms.

German interest centers in the problems of prohibition, war debts and disarmament.

Italian officials maintained absolute silence, but unofficially it was stated Italy has very little at stake. Italy is acquainted with President Hoover's views on debts, but she feels that the good relations cemented by the visit of Signor Grandi to the United States and of Secretary Stimson's to Italy will facilitate future debt negotiations if President Hoover continues in power.

It was said, however, that Mr. Roosevelt and the Democrats offer the attraction of an unknown quantity.

Moscow is watching the election with great attention, for Russians believe no American election campaign in recent years has held such a potential stake for Russia. Official silence is complete.

"There is not much difference between President Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt," the Moscow Pravda said. "They are both millionaires, representing big American capital."

Mrs. McCormick's Jewels Are Valued at $777,567

Personal Estate of One-Time "World's Richest Woman" Placed at $1,032,347, Including Some Russian Crown Gems and Other Treasures.

Chicago, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The treasures of art and furnishings with which the one-time "world's richest woman" surrounded herself were listed in terms of their strictly intrinsic and greatly depreciated values today with the filing and approval of the inventory of the estate of the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

Descriptions of famous pieces of jewelry, including some of the Russian crown jewels, and of "priceless" works of art and literature, were made public in a 361-page tabulation.

The bill of appraisement, which required the services of a dozen experts, placed the vale of Mrs. McCormick's jewelry at $777,567 of the total personal estate valuation of $1,032,347.

There was no estimate in the inventory of the value of Mrs. McCormick's real estate, which included her 34-room residence on Chicago's Gold Coast, a 44-room Italian Renaissance home—Villa Turricum—in suburban Lake Forrest, and 52,320 shares in the Edith Rockefeller McCormick Trust.

The present estimated value of Mrs. McCormick's jewels was contrasted with estimates made during her life that her collection was worth upwards of $5,000,000. At the time of her death from cancer several months ago the total value of her estate—real and personal—was estimated at $40,000,000.

Pieces claimed to have been part of the Russian crown jewels in the McCormick collection were evaluated at $193,066.

The most celebrated pieces of jewelry were a necklace of 23 large pearls, with one large cushion-shaped diamond, two large round-cut diamonds and two flexible bars, each bar containing 100 round and 12 square cut diamonds. This piece, even now, was valued at $406,684. Several other pendants were appraised in excess of $25,000.

Famous paintings, archaic manuscripts, a sixteenth century Persian rug, once owned by the Emperor of Austria, elaborate table centerpieces, silver services running into thousands of dollars, tapestries and nicnacs of regal splendor were included in the recapitulation.

Mrs. McCormick's wardrobe, throughout her life the subject of amazed and awed conversation because of her reported habit of buying costly gowns and wraps in duplicate or triplicate, was listed as containing, among other things, 36 evening gowns, 27 gowns, 36 hats, 36 pairs of shoes, 10 fans, 24 pairs of gloves and nine umbrellas.

No listing was made of the famous solid gold table service, reputedly once owned by Napoleon Bonaparte, and which Mrs. McCormick once used in one of her dinners to visiting royalty. There was, however, listed an 18-karat gold bonbonniere with diamonds in each corner and an inscription by Napoleon on March 3, 1810. This was valued at $750.

Brief Arms Parley Attended by U. S.

Hugh Wilson Sits in as Steering Committee Convenes.

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Hugh Wilson, American Minister to Switzerland, represented the United States today at a brief session of the Disarmament Conference Bureau, steering committee for the conference proper. The meeting was preliminary to tomorrow's at which the new French plan for disarmament will be officially revealed.

Germany was not represented today and the bureau avoided discussion of her demand for arms equality, taking up the matter of international supervision of disarmament. Mr. Wilson said the American idea was that there should be reduction of arms before discussion of supervision. He deferred to the majority, however.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, French minister for war, will outline the French disarmament plan tomorrow. Next week Premier Herriot will submit the plan in written form. The bureau decided that November 21, tentative date for resumption of the general conference, is too early. Another date will be fixed later.

one gathering he personally had lost $100,000,000 in the collapse of the Insull Utilities.

He refused demands for his pasaport by American authorities and denounced what he called their attempts to deprive him of his citizenship.

Greek officials had made no decision this evening regarding action on the American request for Mr. Insull's arrest.

(Associated Press.)

Charles A. Bellows and Andrew J. Vlacos, assistant State attorneys from Chicago, sailed for Greece Wednesday from New York to bring Mr. Insull back to Chicago to face trial.

Toronto, Ontario, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Extradition proceedings against Martin J. Insull, who faces embezzlement and larceny charges in Chicago with his brother, Samuel, in connection with collapse of their utilities interests, will be postponed tomorrow for at least one week.

Delay Is Agreed To.

Opposing counsel agreed to the delay today. Edward Bayly, deputy attorney general of Ontario, who is representing Illinois authorities, expressed a wish that the trial be held next week, but J. C. McRuer, counsel for Mr. Insull, asked for two weeks' delay.

A definite date probably will be set when Judge Dudley Holmes adjourns the case tomorrow at Barrie, near here. It was expected the $50,000 bail for Mr. Insull, who is living in modest rooms at Orilla, Ontario, will be renewed at that time.

John Hampton, assistant State attorney for Cook County, Ill., was reported en route to Ottawa from Montreal by automobile today with documents in connection with the extradition proceedings.

EARTHQUAKE SHAKES SAN FRANCISCO AREA

Students Rush From Classes When Sharp Tremors Hit California.

San Francisco, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Earthquake tremors that frightened students into rushing from their classrooms shook the San Francisco Bay Area and other points to as far south as Monterey at 10:55 a. m. Pacific time today.

Although seismological reports described the shocks as light to moderate and of the type not usually causing damage, residents of Palo Alto, home of President Hoover; Redwood City and Santa Cruz described the movements as sharp.

Plaster was cracked in some buildings in San Jose. That was the only damage reported, but pictures swung on their walls and buildings creaked in various places. Shocks were felt as far eastward as Stockton.

One of the effects of the shock in San Francisco, which experienced tremors of varying intensity, was a concerted rush to the telephones. Officials of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported a sharp rise in the number of calls, beginning within 60 seconds of the start of the quake and lasting five or six minutes.

Students in two classes at Stanford, soon to be the scene of President Hoover's homecoming for election, rushed outdoors on feeling the shocks. School children did likewise at Redwood City.

Prof. Perry Byerly, seismologist at the University of California, said his instruments showed a series of very light shocks lasting 6 minutes and reaching their maximum of intensity at 10:56 a. m. He said the center of the shock probably was in the vicinity of Santa Cruz, Gilroy and Salinas, south of here.

Private Zoo Is Sold And Then Massacred

Nashua, N. H., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The wholesale slaughter of a large group of animals of a privately owned zoo at Bedford took place there today as a result of their purchase by a Hudson zoo owner.

The animals killed included two tigers, a cinnamon bear, three lions, two buffaloes, five foxes, a black wolf, a wild boar, seven monkeys, two baboons and four black bears. An elephant was killed yesterday. They were part of a purchase of animals and birds made by John T. Benson, who operates a large animal farm at Hudson. Benson said he decided to keep the smaller animals and birds in the lot, but did not want to include the larger animals in his Hudson holdings.

Contractor Killed In 3-Story Plunge

Death of Ernest Gichner at Frank Hogan Home Ruled Accident.

Apparently losing his balance, Ernest Gichner, 57-year-old contractor, plunged three stories to his death yesterday from the roof of the home of Frank Hogan, prominent attorney, at 2320 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mr. Gichner was examining the roof, on which some of his employes had just completed a repair job. No one saw him fall. A servant heard the impact of Gichner's body and called an ambulance.

Coroner Joseph D. Rogers last night issued a certificate of death by accident. Funeral plans had not been made last night. Gichner lived at 3405 Woodley road.

Mr. Gichner was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and was active during the World War in Liberty Loan drives here. He was a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, the German Turnverein, the Sheet Meal Artisans, and a director of the Franklin National Bank. He was also a member of the Oldest Inhabitants.

MRS. JENNIE JAMES DEAD AT AGE OF 80

Was One of First Women in U. S. to Take Business Course in School.

Mrs. H. Jennie James, 80, died yesterday morning at her home at 2744 Thirty-second street northwest, after a brief illness.

She was one of the first women in the country to take a commercial course; she taught school, participated in the women's suffrage campaign in Colorado and California, engaged in the insurance business, and was the first probation officer in Honolulu during her remarkably full life.

Mrs. James was born on a farm near Columbus, Ohio. She was educated in private and public schools and at the age of 14 went to the Western Female Seminary at Oxford, Ohio. Later she attended the Northwestern Christian College, now Butler University, and there was one of two girls who created a sensation in their asking and gaining permission to take the commercial course provided for men at the college.

She became a resident of Washington in 1917. A daughter, Miss Harlean James, secretary of the American Civic Association, and a son, Justin C. James, survive her.

Funeral services at which Dr. Augustus T. Murray, of the Friends Church, will officiate, will be held at her home at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

In 1906-1907 he was president and editor of the magazine Mainly About People in America, and later founded the Wildman Magazine and News Service.

the others, according to State's Attorney Alan Bowie.

Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, who presided yesterday with Judge Loker, had previously granted the request for a change of venue in the murder charges against James Zalenski and John Wallace. The petition was made by Attorneys Ryon and Paul Mujes, of Baltimore, as the men were brought into court. Their trial had been scheduled to begin yesterday morning.

Wallace's 8-year-old son, Carroll, met him as he was brought from the jail by Sheriff W. C. Hopkins and a deputy. Later, while his father was awaiting the outcome of the court proceedings, the child sat on his father's knee on the prisoners' bench in the courtroom.

Removal of the case to Charles County will bring a third lawyer into the ranks of the prosecution. Customarily the State's attorney of the county in which the trial is held assists in the case, so that Edward J. Edelen, Charles County prosecutor, is expected to aid Mr. Bowie and Special Prosecutor Frank Hall.

RUTH NICHOLS AGAIN IS IN PLANE MISHAP

Takeoff Accident Prevents Trip in Interest of Hoover Campaign.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Ruth Nichols tonight telegraphed President Hoover her regret that a mishap in taking off early today prevented her from making a transcontinental flight in the interest of his campaign.

The plane from which she planned to drop Republican literature from Floyd Bennett Field to San Bernardino, Calif., skidded off the runway and buried a wing in the ground. Fast thinking by Miss Nichols in cutting off the ignition probably prevented the craft from catching fire and burning her.

"Long-distance flying is still in the experimental stage," she wired the President. "I profoundly regret therefore that unforeseen difficulties with the performance of my plane under a superload should have delayed the work which I am so anxious to do in the support of your worthy reelection and trust that an airplane accident involving one individual and due entirely to the exigencies of the demands placed upon the ship will in no way be misconstrued so as to retard the progress of your campaign."

While Miss Nichols and airport officials expressed the opinion the mishap was due to the ship's heavy load of fuel, A. B. Cornell, an employe in the speakers' bureau of Republican Eastern headquarters, expressed a belief the plane "was tampered with to prevent the flight."

Higher Republican officials, however, who described Cornell as "a minor employe," said that Cornell's charge was made on his own responsibility and that they took no stock in it.

It was Miss Nichols' third airplane accident. She was injured seriously in June, 1931, when a plane she planned to fly across the ocean cracked up at St. Johns, N. B. Four months later her plane caught fire at Louisville, Ky., but she escaped.

Hanna Heads Unit To Speed Recovery

Capital Traction President Named District Chief of Rehabilitation.

J. H. Hanna, president of the Capital Traction Co., has been appointed District of Columbia chairman of the committee on industrial rehabilitation in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, it is announced by William H. Meese, vice president of the Western Electric Co. at Baltimore, and chairman of the movement in the Fifth District. The national chairman is A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Pittsburgh.

The committee on industrial rehabilitation was organized in Washington at the recent conference of banking and industrial committees of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts. The fact was made plain in conference discussions that one solution to the problems of employment and business recovery lies in the direction of industrial modernization.

This organization will bring together industrial and business leadership in the principal production centers of the United States and will enroll important executives in the program to start the orders for equipment, machinery and plant facilities in motion.

ROOSEVELT INVITES AID OF REPUBLICANS

have had good, clean, open fights." And he added, "and the people have known of the case."

"I honestly believe that even if the Congress of the United States were to be Republicas in one or both of its branches I could get along with it better than the gentleman who is running for President on the Republican ticket," he said a minute or so later.

"Atta boy," shouted a man in the front row. "You can gamble on that."

Referring to the American system of Government, which he said Mr. Hoover had mentioned in his recent New York speech, Gov. Roosevelt said: "The American Government itself was founded on the principle that many men from many States, with many economic views and many economic interests, might through the medium of a national Government build for national harmony, national unity and interdependent well-being."

"And," he added, "if the President will turn from his made-to-order statistics, which he so sadly misrepresents and misinterprets; if he will turn his eyes from his so-called 'backward and crippled countries,' and turn to the great and stricken markets of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and the other great agricultural States; if he will cease his Utopian dreaming of inventions hidden in the 'locker of science' that are going to make us rich, and turn to the true lessons of American history and the real words of the founders of this republic, he will know what the American system really is.

The candidate referred to the statement he said Calvin Coolidge had made in 1920, that a party long in power reached a point where it failed to reflect the will of the people and should be "relegated to the role of critic."

"That is the sober conclusion of a cautious public man, not long ago President of the United States, Calvin Coolidge," said Roosevelt "With every word of it I heartily agree.

Behind Mr. Roosevelt as he spoke were three pictures. His own hung from the wall in the center of the stage, flanked on the one side by that of Abraham Lincoln and on the other by Theodore Roosevelt.

As he finished, he turned and shook hands with Owen D. Young and they chatted for a moment or so. More paper came fluttering down from the upper galleries and the band struck into a medly of southern music.

Leaving the stage, Mr. Roosevelt returned to his home on East Sixty-fifth street to spend the night.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The text of Gov. Roosevelt's speech follows:

I am here tonight at the invitation of a group of public-minded citizens who have placed principle above party. These citizens whose party affiliation has been Republican have publicly declared that they consider that a change in the administration of this Government is necessary—that it is, in fact, indispensable to a restoration to normal conditions. On such an occasion it is fitting to speak as a citizen rather than as a partisan.

In this campaign, indeed, the personal view I have had of the conditions of need and distress in every part of the Union has brought home to me the deep conviction that in this crisis the national and not the partisan objective must prevail.

To begin with, let me propose a text which, in my opinion, expresses a sentiment that is widely held this year. It is presented so clearly, so distinctly and so admirably that I would not change a word of it even though it was spoken twelve years ago. Coming from a great figure in our national life it deserves serious consideration, and coming from a great Republican it deserves particular consideration from Republicans:

"For one reason or another even a wisely led political party, given a long enough tenure of office, finally fails to express any longer the will of the people, and when it does so fail to express the will of the people it ceases to be an effective instrument of Government. It is far better for such a political party—and certainly better for the State—that it should be relegated to the role of the critic and that the opposing political party should assume the reins of Government. This condition appears to have arrived in America."

That, my friends, is the sober conclusion of a cautious public man, not long ago President of the United States, Calvin Coolidge. With every word of it I heartily agree.

Says Unemployment Shows Need for Regime Change.

There are more reasons than that for a change this year. There are 10,000,000 or more reasons embodied in the blighted hopes of the 10,000,000 or more of the unemployed. No doubt seeking to extend the campaign of fear so foolishly and so wickedly put in motion, the present Republican leader, the President, the other night referred to the fact that if the policies he had so valiantly developed be not continued, "the grass would grow on the streets of the cities." Well, the grass has little chance to grow in the streets of our cities now. It would be trampled into the ground by the men who wander these streets in search of employment.

You have heard in this very city the President's exhortation that to abandon or to change one letter or one word of his policies would mean the destruction of this great republic. But what do those policies boil down to when analyzed by the average citizen?

First, the President takes enormous credit for huge Federal loans to prevent the industrial and banking situation from getting worse. Well and good. But that is a negative credit and does nothing positive to make things better.

Then, he would exhort employers who have no markets for their wares to start their factories, to employ more labor, and thereby to increase production. I ask the simple question, What good is that if the purchasing power of the people to buy these products is not increased? And especially I point to the fact that his program in no shape, manner or form calls for a restoration of the prices of farm products in order that the half of our population which lives directly or indirectly by farming may have the wherewithal to buy the factory products?

Next he brings out a brand-new suggestion. He would have us sit like Micawber and wait for something to turn up. He hints that some great invention, hidden away, as he puts it, in the "lockers of science," may appear overnight and put 10,000,000 people to work.

This is no new fantasy. Many people have been saying this for a long time. They hope for some new equivalent of the automobile or electric power, to pop out around the corner like magic.

The President asks that "the American Government continue to be conducted in this faith and in this hope." I assert that the American Government can not be conducted on the speculation of some new invention which has not yet been made.

Administration Scored For Gambling Policies.

Faith and hope are splendid things but the hunger and suffering of millions of unemployed men are too insistent to justify a governemntal policy that pins its faith on such a mere remote possibility. This expression is another example of the old gambling spirit of the speculative boom that has so sorely mismanaged the country for the last few years. It is the attitude of mind that gussed in 1929 that we might escape the consequences of over-speculation. It is the gamble with fate that led to the foreign loans abroad. Is is the gamble with fate that led the administration to guess in one budget after another that business would suddenly improve, and provide by that gamble the taxable means to meet an extravagant outlay of expenditure. Is is this kind of government by guess and by gamble that the people of this country have resolved to put out of power. I rejoice that Republicans everywhere have decided to lay aside party, to put their shoulders to the wheel to achieve recovery, not by magic or gambling, but by hard common sense and above all by serious and resolute action.

To condense the sum of all of the arguments of the President for his reelection into two sentences is not hard.

He asks a vote of confidence because he says that but for him the situation would have been worse. He asks the Nation to wait and hope for some miracle of invention to make things better.

As you who have followed the Nation-wide campaign which I have conducted for the past three months will fully appreciate, both my political philosophy and my chart of action for the country's future differ widely from those of President Hoover.

Throughout this campaign in every State—and I have been in 37 of them—I have insisted upon the theme that there is a definite and distinct difference between his policies and mine. I have repeated that this program entrusted to me is essentially a national program. Its watchword is interdependence of all groups, of all sections, of all economic interests. Such a program permits of no yielding to sectional or immediate selfish special interests such as those represented by the clients and backers of Mr. Grundy. It represents a recognition of the fact that a neglected group a submerged group, be it agriculture, labor, or finance, or industry, will prevent the recovery of the entire Nation. It is not in ignoring the fact that there are different interests and different parts of the country, and different people with different needs that we build a nation, it is in recognizing them, looking at them, seeing them, consulting them, helping them, always with a view to the larger interest—the interest of the Nation.

Now the President took occasion in this city to speak of the American system and then proceeded to demonstrate that he does know what the American system really means.

Meaning of American System Emphasized.

The American system is not the special, exclusive, vested, patented possession of the Republican party or, for that matter, of the Democratic party. The rank and file of both great parties have deep-seated devotion to the essentials of that system. The rank and file of Democrats believe in the patriotism and loyalty to that system which exists among the rank and file of the Republican party, and the rank and file of the Republican party feel the same way about the rank and file of the Democratic party. In our century and a half of national life we have been ruled by Democrats and Republicans. We have had our ups and downs under both parties.

Therefore, the rank and file of the voters of both parties agree with me today that the most extraordinary, the most amazing and I believe the most un-American episode of this entire campaign of 1932 is the eleventh-hour effort of the President to segregate to himself and his handful of associates in Washington the right to claim an exclusive interpretation of and ownership in the American system of Government. The American system is the common heritage and common possession of all Americans. Five days from today these Americans by overwhelming vote intend to deny and reject the exclusive patent sought by the President and his friends.

The interpretation which you give and I give to the American system of Government certainly does not mean the combination of foreign and domestic gambling that the present leadership of the Republican party has sponsored. It does not mean inviting on one hand the trade of other countries and on the other declaring economic war against them. This is not an American system as I understand the American system. You do not spell out America by combining the economies of John Law and his Mississippi bubble with those of Mr. Grundy and his campaign contributors.

Praises Democratic Policies as Constructive.

The American system, the American Government itself, was founded on the principle that many men from many States with many economic views and many economic interests might, through the medium of a national government, build for national harmony, national unity and interdependent well-being. This is the American system. And if the President will turn from his made-to-order statistics, which he so sadly misrepresents and misinterprets, if he will turn his eyes from his so-called "backward and crippled countries" and turn to the great and stricken markets of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and the other agricultural States, he will cease his Utopian dreaming of inventions hidden in the "locker of science" that are going to make us rich, and turn to the true lessons of American history and the real words of the founders of this republic, he will know what the American system really is.

I offer as a witness, a man who sat and labored with incredible zeal for the making of the Federal Constitution, who participated in the deliberations of the convention that made it, who expended his inexhaustible labors in the writings of the record of this convention, and who in his defense of this Constitution set forth in the Federalist the most authentic and imperishable interpretation of the American system that the world has ever seen. Here is his interpretation:

"A landed interest, a manufacturing interest, a mercantile interest, a moneyed interest, with many lesser interests, grow up of necessity in civilized nations and divide them into different classes, actuated by different sentiments and views. The regulation of these various and interfering interests forms the principal task of modern legislation."

This means that government is intended to be the means by which all these interests and policies are brought into equilibrium and harmony within a single republic. This, my friends, is an expression of the American system at its best and I leave it to you to decide whether the most authentic, the most unselfish, the most unworried and dignified and true exponent of the American system is James Madison or Herbert Hoover.

I have sought during these months to emphasize a broad policy of construction of national planning and of national building, constructed in harmony with the best traditions of the American system. I have concentrated of necessity upon the broad and immediately insistent problems of national scope.

At Topeka I outlined a complete national plan for the restoration of agriculture to its proper relationship to the Nation.

At Salt Lake City I outlined a definite program to give us a national transportation policy, including the rehabilitation of the railroads of the Nation.

At Portland I set forth in definite terms a national policy for the conduct of utilities and especially those engaged in manufacturing and distributing electric power.

Outlines His Program For Government Conduct.

At Sioux City I proposed a tariff policy aimed to restore international trade and commerce not only with this Nation but between all nations.

At Boston I championed the principle that the national Government has a positive duty to see that no citizen shall starve.

At Columbus I proposed the protection of the investing public against the evils and the fraud perpetrated against them during the past ten years.

At Pittsburgh I proposed an honest, national budget system.

And now as to the actual conduct of Government itself—what a business man would call the executive and operating task of the corporation.

It is necessary first of all to recognize the simple fact that, apart from the occasional judicial interpretations relating to Government, we have in Washington as in all the States two constant factors which are working year in and year out, side by side and in constant contact with each other—in the case of States the governor and the Legislature, and in Washington the President and the Congress.

Unthinking people have inveighed against the Congress in every generation of our Republic—little realizing that they are striking at the very fabric of our Constitution. If we were to eliminate the Congress of the United States, we would automatically cease to be a republic.

The real purpose of the Constitution was based on the rightful assumption that the President and the Congress would be sufficiently right-minded, sufficiently practical and sufficiently patriotic to make every effort to cooperate the one with the other. It is not an overstatement either of the fact or of the opinion of the American public to say that the present Chief Executive of our Nation has shown a singular lack of ability to cooperate with the Congress. I am speaking only of the past eleven months since the House of Representatives became Democratic by the margin of a handful of votes. I am speaking also of the previous two and one-half years, during which time the Congress in both of its branches was controlled by the same party to which the President himself belongs. From the earliest days of the special session which he summoned in the spring of 1929, the relations between the Capitol and the White House have, to say the least, lacked cordiality, understanding and common national purpose.

Says President Failed To Gain Congress Harmony.

Let me make it clear that I do not assert that a President and the Congress must on all points agree with each other. Many times in history there has been complete disagreement between the two branches of the Government, and in these disagreements sometimes the Congress has won and sometimes the President has won. But during the administration of the present President we have had neither agreement nor a clear-cut battle. Either would have cleared the atmosphere and would have been far preferable to the smoldering ill-feeling that has seemed to prevail.

I have the right to point out my own conception of the relationship between an executive and a legislative body. I have served as a legislator and as a chief executive. I believe that from the point of view of a governor or a president his relations with the legislative body can be based on cooperation. The fact is that with the great majority of problems mere partisanship should, insofar as possible, be kept in the background. In meeting this great majority of problems they can and should be treated primarily from the point of view of national good rather than of party good. And let me add that in the case of most reconstruction legislation there ought to be no great difference in the policy of the two great political parties.

We are all influenced by our personal experiences. For four long years, as Governor of New York, I have been faced by a legislature, Republican in both of its branches. From the beginning I have worked on the assumption that the members of this legislature were human beings, that they were patriotic, and that most of our State problems could best be solved by cooperation between them and myself. We have differed on certain matters of fundamental policy. In those cases, I have given them battle; sometimes they have won—sometimes, and I think in the majority of cases, I have won; but in all these cases we have had good, clean open fights.

New York Relief Work Speed Is Pointed Out.

However, when the problem has been one affecting human welfare, the Legislature and I have always ended by sitting around a table and getting something practical done. That was the history of the labor legislation in this State during the past four years—of the legislation for the improvement of our hospitals, and our prison system, of the legislation that enacted that old-age-security law—of the legislation that made this State the leader among all the States in providing unemployment relief. In the latter case, I called a special session, I proposed a bill; the Republican leaders proposed another bill. We had our fight; we sat around a table; I met them 20 per cent of the way; they met me 80 per cent of the way. They passed the bill. I signed the bill. The relief work was started—and all of this in the space of six weeks, while it took the Congress six months to get the President to see that such measures were necessary in the Nation as well.

I want to drive home the point that I have practiced what I preach—that there can be cooperation between an executive and a legislative body in the interest of action of getting things done.

And while I draw from my personal experience one part of my record in Albany well illustrates my point. Up to the time I was inaugurated as governor, the record for vetoes belonged to former Gov. Grover Cleveland. But in each of the last four years I have vetoed more legislative acts than did Cleveland himself, and the pencentage of bills passed which received my executive disapproval has run from 25 per cent to as high as 31 per cent of all bills passed. That is not all. During those four years, not one single bill which received my disapproval has been passed by the Legislature over my veto. And likewise with my record of appointments. As in the Federal Government, nearly all important administrative or judicial appointments require confirmation by the Senate. During my four years as governor, not a single one of my appointments has been rejected by the Senate of the State of New York.

One final point on this subject. It seems of course fairly obvious that the next Congress of the United States will have a majority of Democrats in both its branches. Any child can understand that it will be easier for a Democratic President to cooperate with the next Congress than it would be if the present Chief Executive were reelected. But, at the same time, I honestly believe that even if the Congress of the United States were to be Republican in one or both of its branches I could get along with it better than the gentleman who is running for President on the Republican ticket.

The great issue this year is national, comprehensive and humane. I have painted it with broad lines because it is a program for a great nation. That is why, from the beginning, insisting upon the principle of a new deal I have invited to join our cause Republicans who believe that this country needs the tonic of a new alignment of party loyalties, a new and enlightened support of our national faith. This country needs the tonic effect of such a reiteration of American principles. It calls to its service with particular emphasis the independent and courageous spirits who are willing to leave the household of a betrayed faith, who are asking for substance, not shadows, who are seeking for truth, not names for truth.

In speaking for the common purposes of all of these forward-looking men and women I have, I believe, avoided the delusion that this is a campaign of persons or of personalities. To indulge in such a fantastic idea of my own individual importance would be to betray the common hope and the common cause that has brought us all together this year. A great man left a watchword that we can well repeat:

"There is no indispensable man."

But there are indispensable principles—without which government can not serve its purpose. These are the principles of fair and open dealing with the public, of using the great powers of the Government to serve no mean party advantage, of keeping promises made to agriculture and labor, of friendly relations between the Executive and the Legislature, of economic peace with foreign nations, of protection for those who must entrust their savings to others, of social justice for all, and relief for those who are in need.

Reducing it all to the essentials of my speech of acceptance, we want to get for the American people, two great human values—work and security. To achieve this end I invite you all. It is no mere party slogan. It is a definition of national need. It is a philosophy of life. I repeat it with a courage lent by the knowledge that I speak a philosophy of government as well—the ideals which have made us and kept us a Nation.

Howell Says Rail Managers in Coma

Atlanta Publisher Declares "Moss-Back" Methods Retard Recovery.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Railroads of the country have not kept abreast of the times "in meeting conditions inevitably imposed by competition from other sources of transportation," Clark Howell, member of the recently formed national transportation committee, said in a speech here today.

Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, addressed the Junior Chamber of Commerce on "the work of the national transportation committee." His speech contained the first public information on the conception of the committee's work and why it was formed.

"In my opinion," Howell said, "the railroad management of the country has not kept abreast of the times * * * Taken as a whole they have been asleep over a volcano, which threatens the very existence of their property. They have been asking for increased rates when competition should have forced them in exactly the other direction.

"In times past, under prosperous conditions, they have declared unusual dividends, without retiring a dollar of their bonded indebtedness. * * * Moss-back management in some instances has permitted competition to undermine their properties without awakening to the necessity of combating it."

R. F. C. Loan Held Planned for China

Hansbrough Says G. O. P. Would Use Method to Boost Wheat.

(Associated Press.)

H. C. Hansbrough, former senator from North Dakota, said yesterday in a statement issued through the National Progressive League that there were reports that "the Republican managers, in their last desperate attempt to stay the avalanche of agricultural votes against the President, are considering a plea which is hoped will advance the price of wheat. The statement said the "report is current in generally well informed circles."

"The plan, it is said," the statement added, "contemplates a loan through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to China or a corporation acting as agent for China, with which to purchase millions of bushels of American wheat. In other words, it purposes lending a foreign country money with which to buy our own products."

The National Progressive League is supporting Gov. Roosevelt's candidacy.

Borah Pushes Campaign For Thomas, Ill Friend

Lewiston, Idaho, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, said in a statement here today the reelection of Senators Wesley L. Jones, of Washington, and John Thomas, of Idaho, both Republicans, is "vital to recovery of the Nation."

Here to speak in behalf of Thomas, who is ill, the Idaho senior senator said: "I don't want to do for Senator Thomas what Al Smith did for Roosevelt (referring to Smith's Newark, N. J., speech last week). Smith's speech was a tremendous benefit to the Hoover campaign. They had to take Smith off the radio."

Effort to End Berlin Trolley Strike Fails

Berlin, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—An arbitration committee agreed on a cut of two pfennigs (nearly half a cent) an hour in the pay of Berlin's transportation system employes, in an effort to end a strike which began this morning.

The proposal, however, was rejected by the transportation workers' union, with a membership of about 22,000. The union had not indorsed the walkout of 15,000 workers, which forced Berliners to trudge to work in the rain today.

How Coughs and Colds Yield to Creosote

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

ROOSEVELT MAY WIN DETROIT BY 100,000

Couzens Predicts Close Vote in State; Victory for Wets Forecast.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, yesterday told newspaper men that Gov. Roosevelt would carry Detroit by a majority of over 100,000 and that Michigan would repeal the prohibition amendment in the State constitution and the enforcement act next Tuesday.

"The Republicans always have carried the State by tremendous majorities, around 500,000, and it seems," Couzens said, "almost inconceivable that there could be a turnover which would give the State to Gov. Roosevelt. But, in my judgment, Wayne County, which is Detroit, will give Roosevelt this year a majority of 100,000 to 150,000. So far as the State is concerned, I think it will be very close."

Discussing the State prohibition law, Couzens said:

"There is every evidence that the Michigan State prohibition amendment in the constitution and the enforcement act will be repealed.

200,000 Wet Majority.

"The proposition before the voters will authorize the legislation to set up a liquor control commission. I think the repeal proposal and the liquor-control proposition will be carried by a very substantial majority. The majority will be between 200,000 and 300,000."

Couzens said he always has been opposed to prohibition but as representative of his State had undertaken to represent the dry sentiment. He added he felt he would be released from his obligation to support prohibition if Michigan repealed its dry law.

To Summon Committee.

The Michigan senator, chairman of the special Senate group authorized to investigate loans made by the Reconstruction Corporation, said he would call the committee together after the elections next Tuesday. The committee is required to report to the Senate by January 1.

Couzens said his group would look into loans made by the corporation before the provision that corporation loans be made public was passed. He said that in his opinion no harm had been done through the publicity.

Philippine Lawmakers For Gold Basis Duties

Manila, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Disregarding protests of Japanese and other importers voiced at hearings, the Philippine Legislature today enacted a measure providing for the gold basis valuation of imports from countries which have depreciated currencies.

Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt favored the bill. Its advocates asserted that, although it means doubling the duties on such articles as Japanese canvas shoes, these still will be offered under prices existing before the gold embargo.

Governor Rolph Plans Welcome for Hoover

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Gov. Rolph was making plans today to greet President Hoover when the latter arrives in California next Tuesday, en route to his home at Palo Alto to vote.

The governor said he would meet the President's train at the State line, or receive him at Sacramento and either hold a reception for him at the governor's mansion, or extend the State's official welcome at the train.

Buffalo Meat Offered For Needy Is Rejected

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Buffalo meat is going begging in Idaho. Fifty buffalo were offered to the State by the Yellowstone Park for distribution to charitable organizations.

Parker P. Carver, secretary to the governor, has received replies from many towns saying they can buy beef locally at about the cost of bringing the buffalo to the State—and besides it helps the local farmers. Not a request for a buffalo was received.

BIG SOCIALIST VOTE IS URGED BY THOMAS

Says His Program Holds On Hope of Oppressed, in New York Speech.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Norman Thomas told a Socialist rally in Madison Square Garden tonight that "only in the Socialist philosophy of the cooperative society is there hope for mastering machinery for life, not death."

Bringing his campaign to his home city after a Nation-wide tour, the Socialist nominee for President amplified this belief by declaring:

"Only in the Socialist vision of a classless world, only in the Socialist planning, is there practical hope for the exploited workers and the whole class of farmers."

To the question of "Why vote Socialist," Thomas replied:

"Why vote Socialist? For the sake of yourselves and your children, for the sake of the whole company of workers of every race and creed, and for the future of mankind.

"For the redemption of political action from the depredations of old political parties and its use as a means of our social salvation.

"For the sake of our immediate gains now in the midst of this crisis. Nothing will give us more power, no matter whether tweedledum or tweedledee is elected, so much as a tremendous socialistic vote. Nothing will so encourage the workers to build up the intelligent mass movement in which is our hope."

The Socialist nominee said his campaign critics have called him "Communist, fool and fakir."

"It is because I am not a Communist," Thomas replied, "that I advocate an orderly and carefully graduated capital levy, rather than a wholesale confiscation by violence. It is because I am not a fakir that I insist that the well-being of the masses can not be achieved and leave our plutocracy untouched. I leave that false promise to my political opponents. It is not the folly, but the soundness of my proposal which raises these cries of pain from an owning class whose vast property claims have long since lost all sanction of ethics or sound sense."

Capital Man Held In Richmond Theft

Robbed Storekeeper With Toy Pistol and Fled, Police Say.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—A Negro identified by police as James W. Anderson, of Washington, D. C., was held today on charges of felonious assault and robbery of Bernard Coolikoff, 55-year-old merchant of West Richmond.

Police said Anderson held up the storekeepr at the point of a toy pistol, Coolikoff resisted, and in the struggle that followed the Negro struck the merchant in the face and fled.

A passing motorist saw the Negro running with a bleeding face and notified officers, who captured him. Officers said he had the pistol and the stolen $3.43 in his possession.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Representatives of the anthracite operators and the United Mine Workers of America resumed their meeting here late this afternoon for selection of an arbitration board of two members, which will seek to settle the wage dispute in the northeastern Pennsylvania field. It was believed that after yesterday's extended session the two groups had made progress toward naming the board.

ARLINGTON VICTORY PREDICTED BY G.O.P.

"Round-Up" Meeting Held at Headquarters; Special Instructions Given.

At a "round-up" meeting at Arlington County Republican headquarters last night plans were outlined for workers on election day, and special instructions given those assigned to precincts.

Reports were made on the groups meetings which have been held in behalf of the Republican ticket, and the canvass of voters. As a result of the reports, leaders predicted President Hoover would carry the county.

The meeting was attended by members of the campaign committee, composed of delegates from the League of Republican Women, the Republican Club, and the Young Republican Club.

Climaxing one of the most extensive campaigns ever waged in the County in behalf of the Republican ticket, the seventh and last rally will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the auditorium of the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall.

Among the speakers will be Edgar C. Snyder, United States marshal of the District of Columbia, Leo A. Rover, United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, and Miss Helen Cunningham, a Washington attorney.

Meeting at headquarters at Clarendon last night with the Arlington County Democratic committee and a group of political leaders of the county, Representative Howard W. Smith discussed the proper marking of the ballot. He gave particular attention to that section of the ballot having the long list of candidates for Congress who are running at large.

County Chairman William L. Bragg, confident of success at the polls on Tuesday, declared that all plans have been completed.

The Virginia State Corporation Commission has granted a charter to the American Drug Stores of Virginia with its principal office at Clarendon. The maximum capital stock, according to the charter, is $50,000, with the minimum of $1,000.

Morals Low, Says Pastor, Issuing Plea

Declaring "the moral standard of living in our midst is very low," the Rev. Dr. B. P. Robertson, of Hyattsville, has issued an appeal to all other ministers in Prince Georges County to lead their congregations in a series of revival meetings to start November 13.

Dr. Robertson, who is pastor of a Hyattsville church, made his statement in a form letter sent out on the stationary of the Prince Georges County Ministers Association. After calling attention to several church meetings which have already been held in the interest of "Civic Righteousness," he said:

"If we can create a better spiritual atmosphere in the county it will be impossible for organized bootleg and graft and gambling and other evils to thrive in our midst.

"If we can get all the people of the county who desire a better moral and spiritual atmosphere and who are praying for the salvaton of the people and who are hungering and thirating for a clean and efficient administration of the laws of our county, I say if all these will heartily cooperate, it will not be long before there will come a better moral and spiritual atmosphere in which to live."

Man Kills Wife and Son; Pens Note; Is Arrested

Abingdon, Va., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—George Varguson, 50-year-old farmer, shot and killed his wife and stepson today and then wrote a note saying he had committed the crimes because his wife had wronged him.

Varguson, the gun still in his hand, met police when they came to arrest him, and quietly went with them to a jail in a neighboring county. Officers would not divulge where they had taken him.

Gov. Beverly of Puerto Rico yesterday reported that 247 persons lost their lives in the recent Puerto Rican hurricane.

MAN FOUND GUILTY IN HIS SECOND TRIAL

Convicted of Stealing Shoes in Hyattsville; Others Are Arraigned.

Although the first jury to try him in Prince Georges County Circuit Court failed to agree and was discharged, a second yesterday took only 10 minutes to find Roosevelt Jackson guilty of stealing two pairs of shoes from a Hyattsville merchant.

Three persons, George Ferrell, Russell Jones and Peggy McCauley, pleaded guilty to robbing Joseph Schwaline of $9, but sentence was suspended when it was pointed out that they had already been in jail three months and had pleaded guilty. Edward P. Carr, tried before the court for nonsupport, was found not guilty.

George Colbert pleaded guilty to manslaughter, having been indicted for the murder of Stephen Shorter with a baseball bat. Romolo Gentilucci pleaded guilty to possession of liquor and was fined $100 and given a suspended sentence of six months. A similarly suspended sentence and a fine of $50 was given L. S. Rohrer after another plea of guilty on a possession indictment.

Two men, George Rutter and Frank Dufour, pleaded guilty to a charge of chicken stealing and were sentenced, while similar charges against Mrs. Margaret Rutter were nol-prossed. Rutter, who has been in jail since his arrest, was sentenced to three and a half years in the penitentiary, while Dufour, who has been free on bond, was sentenced to four years. Price P. Myers was convicted by a jury of obstructing a public foot path in Mount Rainier, but sentence was suspended when he agreed to remove the obstruction.

What is Cross Blending?

an Artist might explain it this way...

"Let's say you're painting clouds. You've got your primary colors here on the palette. But you haven't the clouds until you blend certain colors into the special tone you want.

"This is very much what happens in making a good cigarette. And I gather that what Chesterfield means by Cross-Blending is what an artist does with colors. Their Domestic and Turkish tobaccos—many varieties of each—are the primary colors. They blend and cross-blend these tobaccos until they get the special tone they want—in other words, the Chesterfield flavor.

"And just as each color you use acts on the others to change and enrich them, so each Chesterfield tobacco partakes of the fine qualities of every other.

"You 'weld' different kinds to get a better kind. That's Cross-Blending!"

THE PEOPLE'S WILL.

While President Hoover revisits the middle west, Gov. Roosevelt exhorts an audience in New York to ignore Republican ties and support him. His appeal is shrewdly worded and well calculated to win the approval of all who believe that better conditions can be obtained only by a change of parties in control of the Government. Mr. Hoover is expected to impress upon the doubtful middle west States the fact that business conditions are improving, in order to clinch the argument that a change at this time would be unwise if not disastrous.

It is a battle royal, such as promotes the health of a democracy. Gov. Roosevelt has conducted his campaign with consummate skill, always stressing the conservative features of his appeal and contriving to keep in the background the radicals who by a few wild words might play havoc with his hopes. He has avoided specific proposals as a rule, confining his addresses to general assurances of a new deal for all elements and all sections and directing his appeal especially to disaffected and discontented voters.

The campaign has narrowed down to the point where every voter must decide for himself whether to stand by the reconstruction program now in process of execution or vote for a clean sweep and a complete change. Probably the decision has already been made. The final week's speeches may have no bearing upon the result. But the people are intensely interested in what Mr. Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt have to say, and of course both parties will exert all their energies up to the hour of balloting.

Americans of both parties are so happily constituted that they can sustain defeat in a national election with amazing aplomb. Whatever the result of an election may be, the parties survive and lick their wounds with unconquerable hope. If President Hoover should be denied a second term the Republican party will immediately begin to organize for victory in 1936. Gov. Roosevelt's defeat would merely stiffen the determination of the tough old Democratic party to "throw the rascals out" at a later day.

The instant acquiescence by all the people in the verdict of the polls is the most inspiring proof in this world that an intelligent people, no matter how numerous or how extensive their territory, are capable of governing themselves. When 47,000,000 voters can work themselves up to fever heat in fundamental controversies and then accept without further ado the decision of the majority, the world is afforded a spectacle of democracy in action which encourages nations everywhere to strive for the ideal of "government of the people, by the people, for the people."

The handicap of immense distances and increasing millions is offset by modern means of communication. California holds instantaneous communication with Maine, and voters everywhere have access to national information. The republic is one and indissoluble, founded upon the solid rock of the people's will.

LOW WHEAT PRICES.

All grain prices are largely affected by the wheat market. The unprecedented slump in the price of wheat recently has resulted in more speculation as to the cause than sound reasoning. There has been general disappointment that wheat prices have not responded favorably to the reduced production this year in the United States and that the grains have not participated in the improvement in business throughout the country following the general restoration of confidence in the banking and financial structure.

The most logical explanation of this situation comes from the Journal of Commerce as a result of its survey of the world situation. The principal reasons for the weakness in wheat prices, according to this impartial authority, include the following factors:

(1) An increase in the total crop of the northern hemisphere; (2) an expansion in carry-over to a record-breaking total; (3) estimates of a larger acreage in southern hemisphere countries; (4) the depressing effect of heavy Canadian marketings at a time when European importing countries are sharply reducing quotas; (5) the large yield of corn and ample supplies of other grains; and (6) the fact that the demand for wheat is relatively inelastic and, consequently, receives little impetus from an improvement in business sentiment.

Chicago economists have attempted to put the blame very largely upon the continued selling of Canadian wheat at low prices, not without charges of "price cutting" and determination to sell the Canadian crop "at any price." It can not be denied that Canadians have sold wheat while many American farmers have been holding for a better market, but the world conditions so succinctly pointed out by the Journal of Commerce show that there are various other elements entering into this equation which must be considered.

FRENCH "SECURITY" AGAIN.

Details of Premier Herriot's disarmament plan are gradually coming to light. It is apparent that the most pleasing features of the plan were presented first. After statesmen all over the world became interested in the substitution of militias for professional armies the French premier began to release further plans for "specialized national contingents sufficient to suppress aggression" to be placed under control of an international staff. This is a rebirth in new form of the old French idea of an international army to keep Europe at peace.

Great Britain and the United States would not be asked to join in this movement. It would be strictly an European effort to suppress war by abolishing neutrality and directing the guns of all European powers on any nation pronounced to be an aggressor. The elimination of Britain and the United States from this scheme is represented as a concession to British and American public opinion. But it does not seem to involve any particular sacrifice on the part of France, because the domination by that country and her allies over an European "peace army" would be more pronounced if only European nations should be included in the agreement.

Hence, opposition to the French maneuvers for greater security will shift from Washington to Berlin and Rome. Germany and Italy would doubtless join in the movement for substitution of militias for regular armies, but how could they contribute to an international army to be used against aggressor states when France and her allies would, in all probability, control such an army? Premier Herriot was very astute in leaving this part of the plan unexplained at first. But whatever enthusiasm his first version of his disarmament plan aroused in Germany and Italy may be expected to subside without delay.

French spokesmen continue to assert that the Herriot plan contemplates no promises from the United States. But Premier Herriot makes no secret of what is expected. The policy approved by his party in convention at Toulouse contains this suggestive idea:

> If the United States accepts the Capper resolution to amend the Kellogg pact, a great step toward the problem of the liberty of the seas will have been achieved.

Every effort is being made not to frighten the United States away from the French plan, but it is becoming more and more apparent that Mr. Herriot envisages an anti-war pact with this country.

There seems to be no possibility that the United States will adopt the Capper resolution providing an arms embargo and a trade boycott against violators of the Kellogg pact. If such a measure had been in effect this Government might now be at war with Japan. The American people have made known with finality that they will not assume the role of peace guarantor of the world. If Premier Herriot is building his plan on the assumption that the United States will embrace that principle, even in a minor degree, it is doomed to failure.

Full details of the Herriot plan are not available, but it appears that he is merely using the "militia" idea to make a new approach to the old French plea that other nations must guarantee the security of France before Germany will be granted a status of national equality.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

One aspect of this year's presidential campaign brings general satisfaction. That is the economy with which it has been conducted. It is estimated that the total expenditures will not exceed $3,500,000 this year, compared with about three times that sum in 1928. Both parties have been forced to cut down their expenses because of smaller contributions. Indications are that neither will incur a debt in this contest, but the Democratic deficit inherited from Al Smith's campaign remains unpaid.

As usual Republican contributions are running ahead of contributions for the Democratic ticket. When the final report is made Republican receipts may run as high as $2,000,000, and Democratic receipts about $1,500,000. In both parties most of this money comes from wealthy individuals. Drives to have the rank and file of party members contribute $1 each have been unproductive. For the most part campaign contributions are obtained in lumps varying from $100 to $50,000.

Even though the party budgets have been drastically reduced, the campaigns have been carried on with the usual intensity. Frills are lacking, but neither party seems to have curtailed its substantial campaigning because of the reduced expeditures. It is true, of course, that a dollar today goes much further than it did in 1928. But aside from that the parties have demonstrated that they are able to get along with a fraction of the extravagant campaign funds that have been accumulated in recent election years.

It is quite essential that political campaigns be carried on under a republican form of government. They can be financed only by donations from party members. There is no inherent evil in spending money to get the issues of an election before the people. Only when the use of money becomes excessive does it give rise to corruption and interfere with the proper functioning of representative government.

Hard times have taught both parties that they can carry out intensive campaigns without spending several millions of dollars. This fact ought to have an important bearing upon campaign solicitations and expenditures in the future.

THE SOVIET MUDDLE.

Vivid pictures of how the communist system is operating in Soviet Russia are frequently given by experts who are employed by the Moscow government. One of the most interesting close-up views comes from Arthur E. Geltman, a British accountant who was employed by the Soviet to introduce modern accountancy into communistic industry. For nine months he tried to install rudimentary business methods. Now he has returned to England, convinced that it is impossible to accomplish that task. Factory managers will keep no accounts. They merely guess at costs, volume of production, &c., and give their estimates to the newspapers for publication as Soviet propaganda. Modern equipment, such as calculating machines and dictagraphs, may be found in some offices. But it is never used because the office workers do not know how to operate it. Such machinery, says Mr. Geltman, is only for show purposes.

Inspecting the Soviet factories, Mr. Geltman found that finished products are left lying in pools of water. In some factories, he says, 50 per cent of the materials are wasted. Two tractors could be made from the steel that is required for one in the Soviet. The motor car factory at Nijni-Novgorod turned out five trucks on its opening day, but did not produce another truck for two months.

Factories are built without roads or railway facilities. Even where the railroads are in operation delay is amazing. Locomotives are rusting in disuse while the factories are paralyzed for want of coal. Everything is in disorder; there is no organization, no competent planning; no one takes responsibility, and those who have key positions frequently seek demotion because of the danger of being shot if a mistake is made.

Idleness among the workers is the rule and not the exception. When Mr. Gelfman asked one group the reason for its shiftlessness, several members replied: "Why work? A bread card—and no bread! A sugar card—and no sugar! A few rubles that buy nothing to make life worth while!" Some poisoned their hands with ivy to obtain sick leave.

This is truly a pitiful picture. The Soviet dictators are blundering along with experiments at the cost of starvation and degradation of the people. The hordes of Russia wander from one job to another, finding always the same incompetence, the some domination of business by politics, the same scarcity of food and clothing, and the same collapse of ambitious schemes.

When scores are totaled Speaker Garner will doubtless be in first place as the forgotten man of the campaign.

Whoever loses on November 8 may find some comfort in the fact that his opponent won't exactly fall into a bed of roses.

The Socialist candidate was ruled off the ticket in Oklahoma, but Senator Thomas has not been heard to complain.

DICKENS' DOUBLE MYSTERY

By Dr. A. S. W. ROSENBACH, in Saturday Evening Post.

One of the greatest books from Dickens' pen deals with a murderer's career—"The Mystery of Edwin Drood," which Longfellow considered one of his most beautiful works. It was left incomplete. He was working on it the afternoon before his death, June 8, 1870.

Perhaps it is just as well that the ending of this immortal story will never be revealed. Here is a mystery within a mystery, and the solution was only within the tremendous brain of Charles Dickens. Thousands of suggestions have been made, but the real denouement remains a mystery.

Like nearly all Dickens' works, this book was to be issued in twenty parts. Only six were ever published by his old publishers, Chapman & Hall, in 1870. We do know from the author's letters, and from what he told his friend and biographer, John Forster, that the novel was to consist of the murderer's own view of his crime and the causes that led up to it.

I rejoice in the autograph manuscripts of the "Pickwick Papers" and "Nicholas Nickelby," but alas! the original draft of "Edwin Drood" will never be mine. This unfinished manuscript is one of the prized possessions of the Forster collection in the South Kensington Museum in London.

Dickens was to receive $37,500 for the copyright, and a half share of the profits after the sale of 25,000 copies, as well as $5,000 for advance sheets to be sent to America. This totaled the largest sum ever paid, up to that date, by a publisher for a novel. I would gladly have given that much for this last manuscript of Charles Dickens.

Many writers of small reputation have written other "sequels" and second parts to this work. What a pity it is that Edgar Allan Poe was not alive to solve this riddle! He had already tried his hand very successfully at that sort of thing.

REMOVING INK FROM PAPER

The inventor of a method for removing ink from used paper predicts a substantial restoration of usable pulp when his invention is perfected. A demonstration recently given before the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association in Asheville, N. C., supported his claims, at least "in principle," according to the Indianapolis News. The use of timber from thousands of acres annually in the production of newsprint pulp long ago raised a question as to where the future supply of pulp could be found. Simultaneously it was discovered that paper can be made from any fibrous vegetable material, grass, cane and cornstalks particularly. Weight, bulk and cost enter as controlling factors and practical deterrents. The ink-removing method will enable the manufacturer eventually to recover a considerable quantity of used paper that heretofore has been good, if at all, as pulp for coarse and colored paper in remanufacture. Inventors hope to find substitutes to meet demands in the far future if the forest resources are exhausted. Quality is, of course, the chief problem.

HEAVY RAIL SHIPMENT.

There aren't very many trainloads heavier than the one hauled recently by the Chesapeake & Ohio from Lee Hall, Va., to Columbus, Ohio. In the train were seventeen giant Coast Artillery guns, each weighing 404,000 pounds, according to Railway Age. The length of each gun and its undercarriage is about equal to that of three ordinary freight cars. The guns are mounted on their own wheels and are readily movable over railroad lines. Collected from Eastern seaboard fortresses, the guns, which had been discarded by the Government, were sold to the Weirton Steel Mills, at Weriton, W. Va.

All That a Man Has He Will Give for His Life, but Not Always Willingly

By ROBERT QUILLEN

LAME PRINCE RICHARD, walking the highway alone, had been set upon by enemies of his house. Now he stood with his back to the cliff fighting for his life. At intervals his flashing sword cleared a space about him and won a moment's truce, and in this brief respite he snatched a horn from his belt and blew a shrill blast that echoed far and wide.

The first summons had reached the ears of Richard's free-born yeomen as they worked in the fields and now they appeared around a bend in the highway, running hard, each man armed with the tool he held in his hand when duty called him.

The enemy was quickly routed, but none too soon. Richard was far spent and bled from a score of wounds.

"Well done, children," he panted. "Now get me to my castle, for I am grievously hurt."

They got him home and abed and leeches dressed his wounds and he set his house in order to begin the long hard business of recovery.

On the morrow he called his chamberlain to his bedside and said: "Many stout fellows fell in that fight, and some did not rise again. I must pension those who were hurt and the widows and orphans of those who died. See to it." And the chamberlain did as he was told.

Now the yeomen who quit their fields at the sound of the horn were not equal in point of service, for some had taken part in the fight and some had arrived too late to strike a blow. But all alike were called veterans and all were held in equal esteem by Prince Richard.

But some of them who had fought and some who had arrived too late felt aggrieved because their service was unrewarded, and they appointed a spokesman to call upon Richard and demand pensions for all of their number.

When Richard had heard their demand, he said to them: "Why did you serve me? Because you were loyal men and my need was great? If that were true, you would serve me now. My purse was lost in the fight; enemies threaten me still; and while I am down I have greater need of loyal help than ever before. Did you save me from my enemies only to do me equal hurt yourselves? If you will not help me to my feet, how can you be loyal men? And if you are not loyal men, how can I owe you anything at all?"

That should end a good fairy tale, but it wouldn't be good history. As a matter of historical fact, the yeomen got what they demanded and year after year demanded more and Richard spent his whole life paying them for saving it.

PRO AND CON

Senatorial Battles.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

This last week of the campaign finds the fighting intensified rather than diminished. In Indiana Senator "Jim" Watson is waging the stiffest battle of his career, trying to ward off the drive of Mr. Frederick Van Nuys, former United States district attorney. In Utah, patriarchal Senator Reed Smoot has caught a Tartar in his Democratic opponent, Dr. Elbert D. Thomas, professor of political science at the State University, and their contest is admittedly nip and tuck. In New Hampshire Senator George Moses, president pro tempore of the Senate, is finding the attack of Mr. Fred H. Brown disconcertingly strong. In Ohio Senator Bulkley has nothing like a walkaway, with Mr. Gilbert Bettman, Ohio's Attorney General, as his opponent.

Add to these the sharp opposition to Senator Thomas in Idaho, Senator McGill in Kansas, Senator Jones in Washington, Senator Thomas in Oklahoma and Senator Barbour in New Jersey. And toss in, for good measure, the Wisconsin fight for defeated Senator Blaine's seat, the Missouri fight for retired Senator Hawes' seat and the Iowa free-for-all with defeated Senator Brookhart running as an independent against Messrs. Henry Field and Louis Murphy. Add also the three-cornered struggle in California for defeated Senator Shortridge's seat. The total is a senatorial battle-royal such as the country has not seen in years.

John Tilson Retires.

Brooklyn Eagle.

John Q. Tilson announces that his formal retirement from the House of Representatives will take place December 3. Plenty of Democratic members will regret his resignation. His Republican partisanship had frankness and aggressiveness in it, but no bitterness, only a nutmeg flavor expected in a Connecticut man.

"Most Critical."

Topeka Capital.

Orators are reminding us that this is "the most critical campaign since the Civil War." We recall the same reminders in the campaigns of 1896, 1916, 1920 and all others intervening and since. Wonder what the campaigners of 1864 compared the critical character of that year to? Probably 1776.

Overrated Financiers.

Frank Kent, in Baltimore Sun.

If there is one overrated thing in this country, it is the political influence and acumen of the so-called "financial interests" of New York. There was a time in days gone by when they acted as a unit, under the direction of dominant men, and wielded a power in political campaigns hard to exaggerate.

That time has long gone by. There is today—they say so themselves—no real leadership in the New York financial world, no outstanding figure whom the street follows and to whom it looks for guidance. The complete absence of real leadership among the New York bankers and industrialists has been abundantly demonstrated since the crash first hit us in 1929. Nowhere has there been more timidity, more panicky fear, less power of concentrated thought and more general indecision and weakness than among the supposedly strong figures in finance who live in this city (New York).

Wasteful.

Louisville Herald-Post.

An Eastern school sent up an expedition 20,000 feet to study the winds, which seems like an unnecessary expense, with the campaign speeches being flung about right here on the ground.

Overlooked.

New York Sun.

Something is wrong with the campaign. Neither party has blamed the other for the loss of four inches in the height of Pikes Peak.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Al Smith Carried Many States by Straw Poll, Says Analyst of Recent Figures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Literary Digest's semifinal poll of October 29 is politically accurate and significant and makes horse-sense, it is now quite clear that Mr. Smith, in 1928, really carried the following States by overwhelming majorities, and that they were inadvertently accredited to Mr. Hoover, to-wit: Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia; and, further, that Mr. Smith by a vote of 3 to 1 lost the State of Massachusetts which somebody's blunder in the counting gave to him by a narrow squeak; and that he really lost Rhode Island also by 5 to 2, although that was allotted to him four years ago by some one who had not read this last week's report in the Literary Digest.

Mr. Smith will be pained to learn from this current semifinal poll of the Digest that his real vote in New York State was barely over one-half of Mr. Hoover's instead of the 20 to 21 ratio, shown by the records. He may be consoled, however, to see that he narrowly missed getting Maryland's vote, which this Digest poll shows was 15 to 16 instead of nearly 2 to 3 as recorded in 1928; and he has cause to be really enthused in finding that Mr. Hoover did not give him the 3 to 2 licking in Kentucky, but that it was a typical old Kentucky neck to neck race of 154 to 155.

The Literary Digest is honestly trying to get the truth from some millions of people, of whom some hundreds of thousands are patiently lying if—and underscore the if—we are to receive the Digest's current semifinal poll as a reasonable cross-section of current political opinion. The boys in the trenches have waked up to the political possibilities in the shift vote game, and are playing it for all it is worth.

ROBERT LEE DUNHAM.

No Party or Individual to Blame For World Depression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Elson's History of the United States, in the next to the last chapter, entitled "Results of the World War," on page 978, we read that "the cost of the war reached a stupendous figure—about $200,000,000,000 as direct outlay and more than twice that amount if the loss to industry be included."

While political orators are making the welkin ring about depression, hard times, remedies, &c., would it not be a good idea for everybody to stop and reflect for a moment that neither one of the two great parties, nor any one individual of either party, can, in justice, be blamed or called to account for the distress that has come upon the whole world? Does any one think that the nations of the earth can go out and spend over hundreds of billions in war and not come to grief? The depression developed into a panic which spread far and wide, bringing destruction to individuals as well as nations. It finally reached the United States, and if President Hoover had not exercised his wisdom and foresight, the people of this nation would have found themselves in as dire straits as the people of Europe, South America and China.

It seems to me that these people who want to blame him for the conditions which were brought about through no act of any one individual are lacking in ability to judge anything justly. C. G. DEGMAN.

"Good Money or None" Is Motto of Subscriber Who Fears Big Issue of Bogus Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: T. J. C. of Bryant, Va., speaking for "The People," doesn't include me in his group, I trust, because if the government should issue unsecured or fiat money, commonly called greenbacks, I for one, would refuse to honor such strange money. As Hoover said in his address, I would hoard my sound money which is backed by gold in the Treasury, and refuse to accept any fiat money in exchange for my secured paper money. If the Democratic Congress succeeds in getting the bill through which proposes to issue fiat money with which to pay the veterans, it would be a good thing for the veterans if no one would honor such worthless money. We don't want the same conditions that exist in Germany. Good money or none is my motto.

M. E. YATES.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE TREE AND THE FARMER'S STALL.

The paved Ann Arbor road,
Must see, if he observe at all,
Scarlet and gold bestowed
Upon a solitary tree,
Which stands beside the way,
So lavishly that it might be
The king of trees today.

For miles the driver views the flare
Of crimson 'gainst the sky,
And thinks that surely far off there
A pageant's passing by.
To him a blaze of color seems
To mock the noon-day sun,
For one poor tree he never dreams
Such glorious robes were spun.

Yet underneath that spreading silk
No monarch's purse could buy,
A farmer barters cheese and milk
And pumpkins for a pie.
"And lucky man is he," I say,
"In these brief days of fall,
To have such plumes of splendor play

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

BRING ON THE DAY.

FOR November 8 I'm yearning—
How I'm pining for the day!
For the eighth my heart is burning
And I want it right away!
What? To vote? That's not the reason;
'Tis a day of days for me
Cuz it shuts the open season
On campaign loquacity.

II.

Oh, the 8th of sharp November!
Oh, the long-awaited date
When I won't have to remember
To tune in on speakers "great!"
What a joy, hey nonny-nonny!
For a fellow just to know
That there'll be no more baloney
On the household radio!

III.

Oh, the eighth, the eighth, come quickly!
(And the ninth and tenth as well),
For my reason functions thickly
And it has for quite a spell;
I am weary of attacks and
I am weary or replies,
I am weary of the facts, and
I'm as weary of the lies.

IV.

Give me quickly mid-November,
Speed the Christmas season, too,
For I know that in December
There'll be better things to do
Than to listen to some fellow
Cry, "I beg of you, my friends!"
And to hear another bellow,
"On your vote our cause depends!"

V.

I have suffered, yes, and greatly
These past months, as who has not?
And it's been more painful lately
Since those orators got hot;
Speed the winter season, brother—
It will seem so fine and grand—
Mine and many million other
Ears have had all they can stand!

VI.

Time can never be too fleeting
When election year comes 'round,
For the people take a beating
Mid the fury and the sound;
Still, I love the speakers (maybe)
As rare gems of thought they drop,
For it feels so good, oh baby!
WHEN IT'S TIME FOR THEM TO STOP!

A CAMPAIGN SUSPICION.

THE Presidential candidates have made so many references to the "new deal" that some of us thought a practical joker had mixed their manuscripts with a copy of the new contract bridge rules.

AND DOUBLED AND REDOUBLED.

And speaking of bridge and politics, it is easy to see that both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt are "vulnerable" this year.

THE READJUSTMENT PERIOD.

Tony the Bootlegger is not worried about what will happen to him with the modification or repeal of prohibition. "Listen," he says, "it will take the people of this country ten years to get themselves back into shape where they can drink good stuff."

CAN YOU REMEMBER

Away back when tickets to a major football game were so hard to get they were called "coveted pasteboards?"

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

PRESIDENT HOOVER will again be immediately followed by Gov. Roosevelt on the radio tonight. The President will begin speaking in St. Louis at 8:30 o'clock. At the conclusion of his address, 10:30 o'clock, Gov. Roosevelt will be heard from Brooklyn.

As a forerunner to President Hoover, John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, will speak over WRC at 8 o'clock.

Now that the "Big Broadcast" has left town, perhaps we may be permitted to say that it is even more disillusioning to see some of the big radio personalities than it is listening to their radio performances, as bad as some of these are.

GLENN T. TUCKER, in charge of public relations of the Radio Corporation, in New York, greeted old friends here yesterday. Glenn, a Hoosier by birth, was a former Washington correspondent stationed at the White House.

So that everyone may have an opportunity to gather about the radio at the Press Club election night, the club will have an open house for members, their families and guests. Leased wire facilities will supplement the radio reports.

There will be music and dancing, and the party will start off with a large dinner

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI, conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra, in the concert to be broadcast over WJSV from 2:30 to 4 o'clock this afternoon, will feature the Sibelius "Symphony No 4 in A Minor." Other compositions on the program will include selections from the works of Stravinsky, Debussy and Ravel.

Christy Walsh's interview guest during the all-America bootball show tonight will be E. P. "Slip" Madigan, former Notre Dame star and present coach of St. Mary's (WMAL, 9 o'clock).

"Doors," a new series of dramatic playlets, opens on WMAL at 8:15 o'clock tonight. The cast includes Violet Watcher, Kirk Frederick, Paul Alexander and Fritzie Firey.

A WEDDING of interest to many Washingtonians will take place in St. Luke's Church, in Baltimore, at 7 o'clock tonight, when Miss Elizabeth Gray Turner will be married to Bert Hanauer, jr.

Mr. Hanauer, formerly with Station WRC here, is now program director of Station WFBR. Miss Turner is a radio singer in Baltimore.

Highlights of the presidential campaign will be reviewed in dramatic form when the "March of Time" is broadcast over WJSV at 8:30 o'clock tonight, if in the last minute it is not canceled for the President's address at St. Louis.

"President Hoover" and "Gov. Roosevelt" will engage in a point-to-point debate on the salient issues of the times.

IN an effort to learn the public's reaction to his program, Eddie Dooley, football dopester, started a conversation with a stranger in a filling station on the general subject of radio programs.

"Oh, they're all right," was the reply. "But your guess is just as good as that guy's."

"Music and the Listener" will be the subject of the talk by Mme. Olga Samaroff Stokowski, concert pianist and teacher, during the second of a series of broadcasts dealing with juvenile education through the medium of radio concerts (WJSV, 11:15 a. m.).

The Funnyboners, heard over the Columbia network three times a week, will do their broadcasting from Station WJSV while here this week, playing an engagement at Loew's Fox Theater.

Dave Grant is the oldest of the trio, being 32 years of age. Bunny Coughlin is 28 and Gordon Graham 24.

WHILE Harry Sosnik was in Columbia's Chicago studios rehearsing his orchestra in a new arrangement of "This Is My Lucky Day," burglars were busy in his home ten miles away, carrying out almost everything but the kitchen sink.

As Harry was driving to the detective bureau a few hours later in an attempt to identify some loot taken from two suspicious characters, a wheel came off his automobile and he narrowly escaped injury. "This Is My Lucky Day" was dropped from the program.

CULBERTSON RAPS SIMS' BID SYSTEM

Holds Guesswork Has Been Substituted for Skill in His Method.

By WILLIAM J. HUSKE
(Ely Culbertson's Editor in Chief).

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—After reading the revelation of the system of contract bidding by his friend, P. Hal Sims, Ely Culbertson told me that Mr. Sims' unquestioned skill as a player appears all the more remarkable to him.

Mr. Culbertson pondered on the "Sims System" of contract bidding compared with the simpler, more direct and more precise inferences available to those who use the Culbertson or approach-forcing system of bidding.

To Mr. Culbertson it appears that Mr. Sims, when he sits down at the bridge table, lives in a topsy-turvey world where favors go by guessing, not by scientific precision in the bidding.

For instance, take the requirements for an opening bid of one. In the system which bears Culbertson's name, first or second hand holding 2½ honor-tricks, makes an opening bid, not vulnerable. If the player has a biddable suit, he bids it, his choice of a declaration depending upon the approach principle, which, briefly stated, is that whenever a hand contains a biddable suit or is a notrump hand, the suit and not notrump should first be bid.

Approach Principle.

The approach principle is the corner stone of scientific bidding. It permits the cheap and easy interchange of information between the partners. The opening bid is the first step of an aggressive campaign, and Mr. Culbertson never has belonged to a school of bridge players which subscribes to the doctrine of passive resistance as the best way to win a tournament or to win a rubber.

Naturally, with third or fourth hand, after passes by first and second, the requirements for opening bids are slightly higher. Either the trump suit must be longer and stronger or the hand must be buttressed with additional honor-tricks. This to Mr. Culbertson seems logical, clear and straightforward.

However, he finds, through studying Mr. Sims' methods, that the procedure should be entirely different. The first decision to make, Mr. Sims states, before making a bid, is to determine whether or not your side will eventually win the auction and become the declarer. This decision must be made with the rapidity of the blink of an eyelash. If you have reached this decision, the rest is easy. You keep on bidding and bidding and bidding, because you have an "aggressive" type of hand.

Nonbidding Hand.

On the other hand, you may see in your hand three fine honor tricks—two aces and an ace-king, or conceivably three aces—but in weighing the probability as to which side will win the eventual declaration, for some hidden reason you have determined that the other side and not you will become the declarer. Embraced in hands of this type he includes all hands of 4—3—3—3, 4—4—3—2, or 4—4—4—1 distribution. Certainly the classification of the unusual freak of 4—4—4—1 with the hypocrite type of distribution, such as 4—4—3—2 or 4—3—3—3, is in itself the mark of genius.

In the approach-forcing system, the opening bid of one no-trump is probably the weakest of all bids. It does not suggest a hand in which the prospect of game is great unless partner can respond with a show of strength. Mr. Sims, however, reserves his no-trump bids for hands containing from three plus honor tricks up to four.

The principle upon which these strength-showing no-trumps are based is, of course, unsound. The opening bid, whether it is a bid of one in a suit or a one no-trump bid, is a leap in the dark. You and your partner are in a position of generals of allied armies. You are seeking to establish lines of communication, even against the enemy forces which oppose you.

Attack Is Best Defense.

It is folly to say that if your hand contains no biddable suit that you must then pass over the right to attack in the bidding of your opponent. Contract bears a close analogy to war, and one of the soundest principles of military strategy is that attack is the best defense. Mr. Sims' personal preference for opening no-trump bids is well known. Some of his teammates, as well as others, have suggested that his preference for this bid is based upon the fact that he plays such hands extremely well.

It is hard to analyze a system of bidding which is so extremely individualistic, so contradictory in many respects as is the bidding system used by Mr. Sims. Mr. Culbertson has frequently said that a majority of the great contract players are poor analysts. He has never thought that he would secure such absolute proof of this statement as is offered in a study of the "Sims system."

He notes another feature characteristic of the Sims system, as already said, the bidding of this master play is highly individualistic. Hence, he outlines no plan for developing the partnership hands. A great contract player is to a considerable extent a law unto himself. He may do what he pleases and, so long as he succeeds, there will be those to bow their heads and bend their knees in acclaim of his prowess.

System Is Necessary.

When one seeks to teach others, however, unless he wishes to be hopelessly mired in a bog of contradictions, he must build up a complete, precise and accurate system. Each part of it must be related to the other.

The approach-forcing system, which had been used with success by Mr. Culbertson and associates since the inception of contract, is a carefully constructed plan of bidding covering all phases of the game. Its corner stone is the exchange of precise information between the partners. Mr. Culbertson can never believe that the substitution of guessing for scientific information will result in a better game of contract for either the average player or the super-expert.

As regards the use of the one over one response, the only departure that Mr. Sims has made from the Culbertson system is that he regards such a bid as absolutely forcing for one round. Mr. Culbertson prefers the much more precise information conveyed by the 99 44-100 per cent forcing over one bid, which is an essential feature of the Culbertson system.

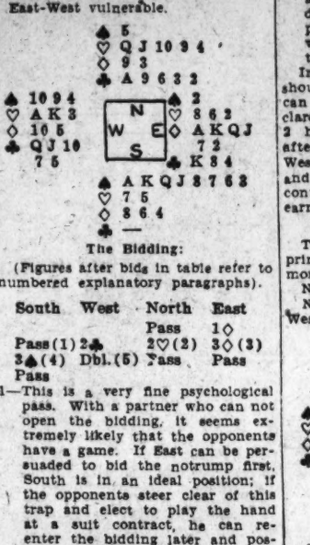
A STRATEGIC PASS.

I HAVE frequently stated how valuable a strategic pass may prove. The fact that a player passes his first opportunity to speak and only enters the bidding after one round has gone by, often causes the opponents to think that he is making a defensive overbid when he finally decides to enter the bidding.

A hand of this sort was played recently at the Cavendish Club in New York City, and I was rather amused to see the South player lay a perfect trap into which his opponents fell headlong.

North—Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
		Pass	1◇
Pass (1)	2♣	2♡ (2)	3◇ (3)
3♠ (4)	Dbl. (5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—This is a very fine psychological pass. With a partner who can not open the bidding, it seems extremely likely that the opponents have a game. If East can be persuaded to bid the notrump first, South is in an ideal position; if the opponents steer clear of this trap and elect to play the hand at a suit contract, he can reenter the bidding later and possibly they may be tempted into a Double.

2—Not a particularly sound bid. North has no knowledge of his partner's holding and attempts to inject a monkey-wrench into the opponents' bidding.

3—Obviously the hand is worth a Rebid.

4—South now feels that he has waited long enough. It seems almost impossible that East will eventually play a notrump contract and even if West bids three notrump, there seems little chance of obtaining a spade Opening.

5—This bid is not as bad as it looks. West feels that he and his partner have no game but that they must hold enough top strength to defeat three spades. South has passed his first opportunity to bid and consequently he probably does not hold a tremendously powerful hand. This calculation would be correct were it not for the great length of the spade suit.

In the play, the hand actually should be defeated, as the trump can be taken off the board and Declarer must lose 3 diamond tricks and 2 heart tricks. Actually, however, after the King-of-hearts Opening, West shifted to the Queen of clubs, and Declarer now had the 9 tricks contracted for. A brilliant pass had earned a well-deserved reward.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

North—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable; East-West 60.

Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO."

IF NOVEMBER 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:15 p. m., and from 5:30 p. m. to 6 p. m. The danger hours are from 11:30 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m.

The child born on this November 4 will most likely be a great lover of the outdoors. His kind heart and gentle disposition will early be seen in his care and understanding of animals of all kinds. He will be possessed of a better than average mind, but his interests will not be directed necessarily toward the acquisition of knowledge from books.

If you were born on November 4 you are probably the possessor of an almost insatiable curiosity concerning the fundamental facts and workings of things. You would do well as an engineer, in research work of some kind, or in some field where you could use your creative ability.

Women born on November 4 would do well in business, but usually they do not care to embark upon a career that leads them to rub elbows with the business multitudes. They generally derive great pleasures from running their homes, and whenever possible they enjoy entertaining their friends in a grand and lavish manner.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

PREPARING babies' bottles has been greatly simplified in the last twenty-five years. There is no question as to Holt's book for mothers having been one of the greatest agencies for improving the care of babies of which the world has known during the last half century. Mothers who owe their lives to having been carried through babyhood on Holt's book have raised their babies on the same general lines. Before Holt there was no chance for a mother to learn the science and art of motherhood except as it was taught practically by old women.

But there was a great limitation to the use of Holt. A woman had to have a college education to mix milk according to his modification recipes. The text of the book was easily understood until the chapters on recipes were reached. It is true that Holt's recipes were as simple as anybody's, but in that day all of them were impossibly complicated for the garden variety of mother.

The recipes for the present day are as easy as the alphabet and almost any mother can use them. One of the simplest methods is that proposed by Dr. L. W. Sauer. He mixes six ounces of evaporated milk with 12 ounces of water and 1 ounce of lactose, which is milk sugar. This mixture is then sterilized by heat—and that is all. The proportions are never changed unless the child has some disorder that calls for cessation of a milk diet or for some change therein. The amount the baby takes at each feeding and the number of feedings a day are changed as the child increases in age.

Even the changes in quantity fed are more fixed than we have been thinking to be best. If the baby is happy, contented, not unduly hungry, well, and growing in weight and length the amount fed daily is not increased. If growth is interrupted and no disease is the cause, if the baby is overly hungry or unhappy, the quantity of food at each feeding is increased. That is simple enough for anybody.

Dr. Sauer says the prevailing price for evaporated milk and milk sugar—the price per quart of the mixture—is no greater than that of mixtures made from liquid milk selling at the prevailing prices for higher grade milks. Since the amount of heating done for sterilization is greater than that usually employed in fixing the baby's bottles the method is especially suitable for those mothers who want to take their babies on trains and automobiles.

This heating feature is a drawback to his plan. His method calls for heating that requires some skill as well as necessitates more expensive glassware. Because of the heating the babies who are on this mixture must have some other sources of vitamins and especially of vitamin C. In consequence they must have fruit and vegetable juices beginning at an early age. However, this is not much of a limitation, since it is now customary to give very young babies fruit juice or tomato juice and sources of vitamin D.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

MILADI'S wardrobe is divided into several distinct groups. Each group has its elaborate phases and its simple ones. In the first group we have lingerie and negligees, and either the tailored or the very feminine style in these is a matter of personal choice.

But there is not much personal choice possible in sports wear, for this must be either suitable for the player, or for the onlooker. Simplicity and a certain uniformity likewise must run through strictly tailored street clothes. Although the dressier type of street clothes is appropriate for almost any afternoon affair, there is hardly a woman who does not care to take advantage of the opportunity to be really lovely and feminine, which is offered her in another group of dressier, more formal afternoon clothes.

The afternoon frock is just another name for what in our younger days was known as the "best dress," and as such it is a very important item in the winter wardrobe. It is the gown which we wear for the afternoon bridge party or tea, for the concert or matinee, and when we pay a call on the new minister's wife. At the present time it usually forms a part of an ensemble, for there must be a coat to match it or, at least, to harmonize with it.

The most popular color for this type of gown "is and was and (apparently) ever shall be" black relieved with touches of white or color. And lengths of skirt are undeniably longer, oh, quite to within a couple of inches of the ankle, my deah. Waistlines are as ever, which means both high and medium and medium-low.

• • • •

I tell you, there was never such a successful idea as the furniture we made from packing cases. Why, you do this and that to a packing case, which is simple as can be, and doesn't even require one to be a carpenter or even wield a hefty saw—or is it a hefty arm? Anyhow, with our directions, the first thing you know you have furniture, and then you either cover it with monk's cloth, or paint it, or do whatever you wish with it—and you have something. Better send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the directions for making this, and just see for yourself if you can live any longer without making some!

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

RAINY, stormy, slushy, perhaps soon snow weather is ahead of us. If you live in Florida, or are planning to spend the winter there, you needn't take this to heart. But for the rest of us, there's a beauty lesson in the weatherman's prediction of "rain, storm or sleet."

At the risk of repeating ourselves, we must again remind you that the truly beautiful one is perfectly groomed and dressed to suit the occasion. She never wears trailing chiffons to the office, nor tailored serge for afternoon tea or informal dinner. She is ready to face the sun at its strongest, knowing that it will only reveal perfection in every detail. And when winter comes, she is never behind in her shopping for "don't catch cold clothes."

Let It Rain.

When cloudy skies threaten, she shrugs a properly costumed shoulder to the tune of "let it rain." For she has assembled a rainy weather costume that is as smart as it is waterproof. Tans and browns, mulberry and greens are smart shades for somber weather, for they have the desired hint of brightening effect in them, without being too conspicuous or inconsistent with the weather.

The clothes mart now offers warm, cuddly, tweedy materials that throw rain off just as a duck does water, and never shrink or ripple or wrinkle. Aren't they worth their weight in gold for the security they give? Hats may match if you like, or sturdy felts (and these are waterproof too) harmonize with coat. Purse should be sturdy too, not the silky or flimsy type. Gloves to harmonize, of course, and either fabric or heavy leather, not the very thin variety.

Overshoes are a rainy weather essential. If you have refused to wear them in the past because of their clumsy bulk, it will please you to look around and discover the new type that fits the foot every inch of the way, as snug as a glove. They come in colors, too, so that black need not be worn with brown and vice versa.

SYMPHONY SCORES IN RUSSIAN MUSIC

Kindler Organization Shows Growing Skill in Program of Slavic Motif.

The magic, witchery and weirdness of the Slavic motif in modern music prevailed in the all-Russian program of the National Symphony Orchestra in its concert in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon under the dynamic leadership of Hans Kindler.

Mr. Kindler selected from the wealth of material available representative compositions which brought the different schools of Russian musical thought into the foreground. Practically all of this music was of a difficult nature as well and the orchestra showed its growing skill in its ability to handle the themes and movements with such consummate ease and vividness of interpretation.

More and more it is demonstrated that Mr. Kindler has his 75 musical men—Washingtonions, all of them—well in hand. They respond to his vigorous baton with a splendid eagerness that augurs well for the future of this organization.

Cordial Response From Audience.

The cordial response the organization meets from the audience each time it plays also is reflected in the improvement of its presentations.

The first number on the program yesterday was Rimsky-Korsakov's always popular Introduction and "Cortego de Noces," from "Le Coq d'Or." The glowing beauty of the measures received adequate treatmeht from the orchestra under Mr. Kindler's leadership and similar reward came for the playing of Moussorgsky's "Chant Russe," with its sonorous themes and the graceful "Promenade and the Old Castle."

The enthusiasm of the audience for things Russian a la musical, came, however, in the playing of Liadov's "Tabatiere A Musique." The quaint strains of the musical snuff box imitated in the score enchanted the audience, which would not be contented until Kindler and his men repeated it.

Ovation for Modern Opus.

Another ovation followed the playing of Mossolov's "Iron Foundry. Music for Machines." The spirit of the new Russia abides in that number with its clanging steel accompaniment and the whirr of the ever-busy machinery audible at all times.

What the old masters would have thought of this most modern of modern music is hard to imagine. But it has a certain charm of its own—that is, a little of it. As a complete menu for a musical feast its enduring qualities would be at least doubtful.

The enjoyment of the afternoon was capped by the masterly production of Kalinnikov's "Symphony in G Minor No. 1." Its four movements have delightful individualities and the lovely andante movement would have rejoiced the soul of any composer.

Dry Law Attacked At Bethesda Rally

Rice Hooe Urges Election of Roosevelt to Stamp Out "Evil."

Prohibition has turned the home into a brewery and distillery, corrupted the public officials of the land, and fastened a dry agent octopus with no regard to personal liberty on America, Rice Hooe, of Washington, told a rally held under auspices of the Veterans' Democratic Club last night at the Montgomery County Building Bethesda, Md. He urged election of Roosevelt and Garner in order that this "evil" can be eradicated from the Nation.

Mr. Hooe said that prohibition has made the pulpits of the country into political debating platforms to the detriment of the church and its members. He said that the wine and beers now consumed illegally if legalized would present the Treasury with some $700,000 in taxes.

Assertion by Col. George R. Laird, of Washington, that Roosevelt would not have been too proud to go to Anacostia and talk with the B. E. F. was received with prolonged cheers. H. L. Bushong and Levi H David, of Washington, and Dr. George L. Edmonds, county member of the Maryland House of Delegates, also spoke in support of the Democratic ticket.

4 Gang Suspects To Be Heard Today

The alleged members of the "Black Shirt" gang which terrorized southern Maryland during the last six weeks are scheduled for a hearing this afternoon before Justice of the Peace R. L. Reich, at La Plata, on charges of having a stolen automobile in their possession.

Preston Swann, who is under suspicion in the holdups, will be given today into the custody of Cecil County authorities. He is accused of having held up a motorist near Conowingo Dam while accompanied by Blaine Swann. The latter was captured after a gun battle, and named Preston as his accomplice, according to police.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT seems to be universally true that insofar as the sound of his own voice is concerned everybody in the world is "tone deaf." This is a source of great comfort to one who for months made daily use of an Ediphone in turning out large quantities of "copy" and never would believe that it was his voice that he heard when playing the records back for verification or correction. It always sounded like two or three other fellows.

Herbert Marshall.

An Ediphone, since you ask, is one of those machines that takes dictation on a cylindrical record and then plays it back to the typist through earphones, saving a tremendous lot of time and worry for all concerned. My typist always insisted it was my voice, good and punk to the last drop of a final inflection! To me the sound was as foreign as the wheeze of a Sahara camel. So we let it go at that.

And now I learn that nearly all movie players, hearing their voices for the first time, complain that they don't sound natural.

It is reliably reported that Herbert Marshall, who recently did so splendid a piece of naturalistic acting opposite Marlene Dietrich in "Blonde Venus," accused the sound men of tricking him when he took his first voice test. Another newcomer to talking pictures, Ralph Morgan, admits that after he heard himself talk he dashed home babbling to Mrs. Morgan about it, and then, to prove to her that there was nothing wrong with him, borrowed a dictaphone and had Mrs. Morgan make a record and then listen to herself. She wouldn't believe it, either!

Mr. Marshall was curious enough about the matter to seek a solution of the phenomenon from the sound technicians, who convinced him that "tone deafness" is responsible. Their explanation ran something like this:

"This is caused by the fact that when speaking normally one hears his voice through his body vibrations as well as through his ears. This gives an entirely different effect than when one hears his voce reproduced from the screen or other recording device. In the latter instance, the body vibrations are lacking and the ears alone are in use."

As further proof of their theory, they tell about the first time Al Jolson heard his voice reproduced. He had sung one of his "Mammy" songs and listened to the playback.

"That's my song all right," he said, "but that guy I just heard sings it better than I do. Now let's hear me."

There seems to be only one thing that can be done about it and that is to stop by the croaker's and have the body bolts tightened to get rid of that vibration!

The report has reached America that a letter recently published in the newspaper Dagens Nyheter in Stockholm, Sweden, urges that Greta Garbo be decorated by King Gustaf with a medal in gold, similar to that awarded Goeta Jungberg, the Swedish soprano and newest diva of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company in New York.

"The star of American movies, now visiting her family here, is one of our greatest ambassadors," the letter said. "An increasing number of admirers in Sweden feel that she well deserves this high recognition, and there is no doubt that people abroad have the same opinion."

The paper added, editorially: "Why not?"

And there, apparently, the matter rests—which is probably doing as well as could be expected in a presidential year!

Mrs. Carter Barron, wife of the city manager of Loew's Washington enterprises, "Chic" to her many friends in the Capital, having completely recovered from the recent illness that kept her confined to her bed for many weeks, left Washington Wednesday for a visit at her home in Atlanta, Ga. Not having vacationed as yet this year—which, by the way, makes us a tie—it is Mr. Barron's plan to join her toward the end of the month, both returning North after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Mr. Barron, incidentally, is understandably proud that the Fox Free Military Band should have continued its habit of copping cups by winning second award among all the bands that marched in the Halloween parade last Monday night. In this connection, it is of interest that Capt. J. B. MacKenzie, organizer and director of the Fox Band, promises that the symphony orchestra being assembled for the Palace Theater will be a smooth-playing organization before the winter is a great deal older, and that it, too, will win its full share of cups, once the public becomes apprised of the ultimate merit promised at this early stage in its development.

Capt. MacKenzie possesses a unique faculty for promoting conscientious effort and wholehearted cooperation among juvenile instrumentalists, whether they have ever attempted to play any instrument before or not. The harder the job, the better he likes it!

Well, at least the boys are giving fair warning of their impending departures from Friday as the accepted opening day of new attractions in the motion picture houses.

In anticipation of unusual power at the box-office, the Warner executives plan to advance the opening date of "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," and Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, already has served notice that "The Most Dangerous Game" will be played only six days on Fifteenth street in order that Ann Harding and Richard Dix may take possession of the screen on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, November 24, in "The Conquerors."

Mr. Meakin, having come across a batch of new bookings while dusting off his desk, makes it known that the line-up at his opera house is as follows:

Following Mitzi Green in "Little Orphan Annie," on November 11, will come Jack Holt in "Man Against Woman," which sounds overwhelmingly like no contest; November 18, Joel McCrea and Fay Wray in "The Most Dangerous Game," for the short week, and then on November 24, "The Conquerors," in which RKO-Radio strongly suspect that they "have something."

Speaking of "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," as we were somewhere back there, Paul Muni—otherwise Muni Weisenfreund—has weighed the star system, as it operates in pictures, and says he has found it wanting, so far as he personally is concerned. He will have nothing to do with it. His unique contract with the Warner Brothers specifically provides that he is not to be officially "starred" in "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang."

He is to make other pictures for the same company over a long period of time, but he is not to make more than two a year. That is another self-imposed restriction which Muni, a young man with firm convictions on many subjects, expects to enforce. He is on guard against one other eventuality. He does not propose to become identified solely with any one kind of role or with any single type of character.

These are but reiterations of rules of labor before the cameras which he confided to me as long ago as when he was in Washington to check personally the public reaction to his work in "Seven Faces," shown long ago at the Fox.

"Seven Faces," it may or may not be recalled, followed his outstanding success, "The Valiant." It required him to impersonate in rapid succession the old caretaker and the living originals of six pieces of statuary in a museum. Not a box-office triumph, it nevertheless demonstrated Muni to be a young actor of extrordinary versatility and great facility of expression in pantomime. "Scarface" offered nothing to dispel this impression.

Now in "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," Muni has a role about which he is thoroughly enthusiastic; enthusiastic even after completing it, when to most actors, a part is "cold." It is, he declares, unlike any other role he has played on stage or screen. He likes that.

The large electric display sign at Forty-sixth street and Broadway, New York, was long the ace advertising spot for film companies in the old days. It had, however, been vacant for three years until last week, when the Budweiser beer people took it over.

CONTEST FILM NOW SHOWING AT EARLE

SYNOPSIS

Dan Hardesty and Joan Ames meet in Hong Kong's most famous international bar and fall in love at first sight. They are passengers on the same liner bound for San Francisco, but each hides from the other the sentence of death that hangs over them. Joan has an incurable heart ailment. Dan faces a death penalty at San Quentin.

Eluding officers, Dan has one glorious day with Joan at Honolulu. He plans to escape on a tramp steamer bound for Mexico. On the way to boat, he tells Joan of his trip. The shock brings another heart attack and Dan forfeits his chance for freedom in order to get the woman he loves safely back to the steamer. En route to the American coast she proposes that they meet New Year's Eve in Auga Caliente and Dan, hiding his grief, accepts with a cheerful smile. Later she learns from a steward what awaits Dan when he arrives. When he says good-bye, they both repeat their pledge to meet below the Mexican border. At that supreme moment neither can say "good-bye."

Starting today, contestants of the Warner Bros.-Washington Post "One Way Passage Contest" will have the opportunity to see on the screen at Warner Bros. Earle Theater "One Way Passage," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone picture upon which the contest is based. Kay Francis and William Powell have the featured roles in this drama.

In conjunction with the showing of this picture, The Washington Post, cooperating with Warner Bros. Earle Theater; the French Line, the Eastern Air Transport System and the Edison Hotel will award a round-trip to France, without any strings or obligations whatever, for the most logical 20-word interpretation of the unusual and dramatic ending of "One Way Passage."

Here is what the winner will receive:

A round trip to France, with an escort, aboard the "aristocrat of the seas," S. S. Paris, of the French Line. Glorious days of joy and play on a restful, invigorating, exciting sea voyage.

And here's the happy part! There are no intricate rules to follow. The few rules are very simple and everyone has an equal opportunity.

1. No employe of a Warner Bros. Theater, The Washington Post, the French Line, Eastern Air Transport or relative of any employe of these firms is eligible.

2. The answer must be sent to the "One Way Passage" Editor of The Washington Post, postmarked not later than midnight seven days following the closing of the picture. That is, November 17.

3. It will not be necessary to purchase an admission for the showing of "One Way Passage." You may use the synopsis published in this issue of The Post.

COACH PIXLEE ILL AS G. W. FACES DAKOTA TONIGHT

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

A NEW method of shearing the lambs has been invented by the gambling rings of the country who, in this instance, are playing on the popularity of football and the fans' ignorance of the odds against them.

In Washington, no less than a half-dozen different operators are conducting what is known as "football pools," circulated to the fans by runners, agents, subagents and subagents of subagents—ho ply their trade in all sections of the city, among the Government Bureaus, in downtown offices and anywhere else where football interest might be displayed.

The bait is the apparently juicy odds that are offered for winning selections. The usual wager is a bet that the buyer can pick four winners out of four games submitted with odds of 10 to 1 offered against him. Little white slips that pass between buyer and agent mark the transaction, the agent keeping a duplicate of the wager.

11-to-1 Odds Appears Attractive.

Ten-to-one odds against picking four winners out of four games appears to be quite generous on the part of the football bookies, but bigger and better emoluments are held out for the fans if they care to take additional gambles. For picking five out of five winners, 15-to-1 is offered; for 6 out of 6 winners, you get 30 to 1; and if you can pick 7 winners in 7 games, 50 to 1 is yours.

They permit you to gamble anything from a dime upward, but the usual wager is a quarter. The big syndicates accept nothing less than 25-cent bets and place no limit on the amount wagered, but the smaller operators have a $1 limit.

But simple arithmetic illustrates that every fan who buys a "football pool" is the sucker. Presuming that each game is a toss-up with no visible favorite, simple odds against picking four winners are 16 to 1, for which the bettor receives 10 to 1. For picking five winners out of five games, the odds should be 32 to 1, instead of the 15 to 1 the bookies offer. For six winners in six games, 64 to 1 is the proper odds, not the bookies' 30 to 1. And the 50 to 1 that the bookies offer for seven winners in seven games, ought to be, by simple mathematics, 128 to 1.

Bookie Selects Games With View to Ties.

The list of games from which the selections are made are submitted, of course, by the bookies. Seven games are usually offered, games of their own choosing, all of which appears to be the week's particular sticklers. It is understood that if you attempt to pick four winners, you must confine your selections to four games, not four winners out of seven games.

But the pool operators get in their dirty work later. If any one of your selections end in a tie, you lose and the bookie wins. And with every game on the list chosen by the bookie for its great possibility of ending in a tie, the chances of the bettor are slimmer than a toothpick's shadow when the sun is settling in the West.

Menace to Honesty Of Football.

So profitable has the football pool become that the large pools are now controlled by national syndicates which provide the list of each week's games to individual operators in different cities. These games, as I have said, are chosen for their possibilities of ties, and often include three or four contests between colleges so unimportant that there is no way to gain an accurate line on their respective records.

With the pool operating on such an extensive stage it is patent to me that this new gambling idea is the greatest menace to the honesty of college football, now credited with being the most honest of major sports. With the operators handling hundreds of thousands of dollars weekly, the money might be made to talk convincingly to outstanding players on a team that figures to win and which virtually every bettor has played to win.

Champion Loses Shoe; Spins Challenger Into Defeat.

Vassel and Marshall Win; Other Bouts Result in Draw.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

JIM LONDOS almost fell afoul of the law of averages at the Auditorium last night, but in the end he planted Rudy Dusek's throbbing carcass on the mat with several vicious body slams, followed through with the inevitable aeroplane spin, and Mr. Dusek had served his purpose. Londos accomplished his sinister task in exactly 34 minutes.

The crowd of 5,000 rose to its feet and almost in a body booed as Referee Cyclone Burns tolled the fatal three counts. Four times Burns started his count, but Dusek found energy enough to slightly tilt one shoulder and break the string, before Londos finally held him on the canvas to gain the victory.

Struggling in his bare feet, Londos worked in fiendish fashion to dispose of the crown prince to the wrestling title for the umpteenth time. Midway in the match Dusek had ripped the sole off Londos' right shoe. But the champ responded to the occasion by removing the tattered remains of the footgear, also his one good shoe, and finishing like the barefoot boy of Whittier's famous poem.

Referee and Wrestlers Go Over Ropes.

Londos made a slow start, as usual, and some deep, bass voice, from the darkest point of the auditorium, suggested that the world champ had been spelled incorrectly.

Dusek was unable to catch the wary Greek with his famed rocking chair hold, but he employed a leg split, coupled with a painful hold on the champ's bare toes, to great advantage. The hold was broken when Londos jammed half his foot down Rudy's throat.

All of the preliminaries were well received. The villains received the customary boos, the heroes were cheered and everybody was happy.

Everett Marshall, displaying his wares for the first time before a Washington audience, disposed of ponderous Alex Aberg in the swift time of 3½ minutes with a reverse aeroplane spin. This spin is accomplished by holding the recipient on the shoulders instead of the chest. Marshall is credited with a victory over Strangler Lewis on the Coast.

Gino Garibaldi, George McLeod and Referee Benny Bortnick supplied a laugh when all three went hurtling over the ropes midway in a rough bout. It ended in a draw.

CANZONERI IS CHOICE OVER PETROLLE

20,000 to See Great Lightweights Fight for Title Tonight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—A champion offers his head to the axman for the first time in the indoor season as dapper little Tony Canzoneri, once a newsboy on the streets of New Orleans, battles fifteen rounds against Billy Petrolle in defense of his lightweight title in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Favored at 2 to 1 to win, perhaps score a knockout, Canzoneri, a brilliant ringman, finished his training chores today weighing only 133 pounds, a couple under the class limit, while Petrolle, whose best duels have been waged at 139 pounds, scaled only 136½ two days ago.

Every indication points to a capacity crowd of close to 20,000 and gate receipts of about $80,000 for one of the most interesting battles among little men staged in the past few years.

Two years ago, when the busy Canzoneri seemed to have worn himself out and Petrolle was coming back from a year's rest, they met in Chicago and the veteran from Fargo, N. Dak., won a ten-round decision.

Since then Petrolle, who never has fought a champion at the weight, has become the most sensational of the lightweight and welterweight contenders, sprinkling a trail through both divisions with topnotchers he either knocked out or outpointed. His victims include Jimmy McLarnin, King Tut, Justo Suarez, Ray Miller, Bat Battalino and Eddie Ran, and he has lost decisions only to Jackie Kid Berg and McLarnin.

Midnight Tonight Is Deadline for Grid Contest

MIDNIGHT tonight is the deadline for fans of the Capital and suburbs to enter The Post's popular Football Selections Contest. All selections postmarked before that hour will be accepted by the Football Contest Editor.

The last day of the contest has been the signal for local football followers to pour their selections into the mails, it has been the experience of the Contest Editor, who for the past two weeks has received more responses on Fridays than on any other day of the week.

The man, woman or child who selects the most winners among the twelve games posted below, will be the recipient of four choice box seats to the George Washington-William and Mary game one week from tonight. To the winner of second place will be presented two choice grandstand seats, with one grandstand seat going to the third place winner.

Nine winners in twelve games is the highest mark thus far established in the contest, but barring upsets this week, the Contest Editor anticipates at least one entry to name ten or more winners.

It is not too late to get in the swim. Merely clip out the list below, insert the probable scores, add your name and address, and mail or send your selection to the Football Contest Editor of The Post. In the event that the contest ends in a tie, the scores will be the basis of deciding the winner. Winners will be announced in The Sunday Morning Post.

Dakota Squad Awed At Griffith Stadium

"Gosh," whispered a North Dakota football player yesterday as he and the rest of the squad ran into Griffith Stadium in pell mell fashion upon arriving at the field from the Union Station. "This is where WALTER JOHNSON used to play."

Three or four of the Bison players asked hurriedly where home plate was and immediately made a fast pilgrimage there to stand in the batting box and yell to impressed teammates, "Hey, BABE RUTH stood right here!"

Their 1,500-mile trip to play George Washington tonight was lost beneath a wave of refreshing hero worship.

G. U. DEPARTS TODAY FOR WEST VA.

Mountaineers Show Great Improvement After Poor Start.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY'S Football Team, with a new pilot at its helm, steers up into the mountains of West Virginia today to Morgantown, where the University of West Virginia's burly Mountaineer squad will be met tomorrow in a game whose outcome football fans eagerly await.

Coach Jack Hagerty expressed no overwhelming optimism last night as he sent his "de-Notre Dame-ized" squad through its last stiff workout. Hagerty has added no new plays to the ten he handed out on the first day of taking over the team.

West Virginia, beaten by Georgetown last year, 13-0, is a much different proposition this year. After a mediocre start, which saw it lose five successive games to Duquesne, Pittsburgh, Temple, West Virginia Wesleyan and Detroit—all by narrow marginia except the Pittsburgh score, which was 40-0—the Mountaineers came back in sensational style last Saturday to beat Marquette, a team which had scored an easy win over Boston College.

Last week's win, Hagerty believes, will give West Virginia the confidence it has needed all year. "Greasy" Neale, coach of Georgetown's opponents, believes the team has at last hit its stride and points with pride to the seven sophomores on the first squad, one of whom, Eck Allen, scored 30 points himself against Marquette.

The Hoyas, with an unannounced starting line-up, number 31 in their squad as they depart today. They figure that their greatest hope lies in the fact that West Virginia scouted them while they were a Notre Dame team, and now they are Warner disciples and the changed order of both attack and defense may upset the Mountaineers.

Nats and Indians Lead Loop With 39 Players

Chicago, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Washington, Cleveland and Detroit lead the American League in the number of players listed on the 1933 reserve list with 39 each.

The list, announced by President Will Harridge, shows no move on the part of most American League clubs to economize on player hopefuls for the 1933 season. With the maximum set at 40, Chicago and New York listed 38 each. Philadelphia, 30; Boston, 28, and St. Louis, usually low in the number of recruits, 22.

Two Players Are Lost to Catholic U.

McVean and Fraatz, Hurt, Not to Face Wake Forest.

Augusterfer, Capital Boy, in Back Field Tomorrow.

ON the eve of a game in which a tremendous amount of football brains is needed to overcome the unbending defense of Wake Forest, Catholic University finds itself without two of its craftiest players—Charley McVean, quarter back, and Vinny Fraatz, considered by many as the best end in the city.

Fraatz was hurt in the Holy Cross game last Saturday, made a recovery early in the week, but further examination of his hip caused him to be ordered out of uniform for at least another week.

McVean suffered a recurrence of an old knee injury yesterday in a rough scrimmage at Brookland Stadium, the scene of tomorrow's game. The cartilege in the speedy quarter back's right knee slipped out of place again, and he may be out for two weeks.

Augusterfer Gets Chance.

McVean's place will be taken by Gene Augusterfer, local boy. The entrance of Augusterfer into the line-up necessitates a switching of back-field duties among the first stringers. Buster Sheary and John Pankowski will take over the kicking tasks, and Tom Whelan will do the passing. Augusterfer, whose generalship has not been proven as yet this year, will do much of the blocking now done by Sheary.

Johnny Ball, a comparatively green end, will take Fraatz place.

Wake Forest, whose defensive vigor is attested by the fact that only one touchdown has been scored against it this year, arrives in Washington this afternoon and will practice at Brookland Stadium.

Duke has been the only team to score on Wake Forest this year, the Blue Devils coming through with a touchdown (off a 65-yard run) and a field goal, for a 9-0 score. Otherwise Wake Forest has beaten South Carolina, 6-0, and held both North Carolinas to 0-0 scores. Four times in the Duke game the Dukes were within Wake Forest's 5-yard line, only to be held for downs thrice, the fourth time resulting in a place-kick.

Four-Hour Boxing Carnival Tonight

Four hours of fast and furious fighting looms for ring fans of the city tonight when the Democratic central committee stages its boxing carnival at the Washington Auditorium.

Amateurs and professionals of all weights will mix it in the fifteen bouts which have been carded by the athletic committee under the chairmanship of Dr. O. U. Singer.

A capacity crowd is expected at the Auditorium, thousands of guest tickets having been distributed by the Democratic organization under John P. Costello, Democratic national committeeman. A few reserved seat tickets will be available during the day at committee headquarters, 1320 G street northwest, and if any are left they will be given away tonight at the Auditorium.

All of the nine amateur bouts on the card are intercity affairs, with local talent opposing outstanding ringsters of Baltimore. The four professional bouts offer the pick of Washington's ring favorites, including Bob Godwin, Jay Owen, Ray Bowen, Harry Kersey, Sammy Lucas, Kid Smith, Joe Doty and Sam Romano.

SEWANEE DRILLS HERE.

En route to Philadelphia for the game with Penn State scheduled tomorrow, Sewanne University's football team will stage a practice in Washington today, and later will be entertained by local Sewanee alumni, of which Col. H. T. Bull is chairman. The squad will be the guests of Carter Barron, manager of Loew's Fox.

VANDERBILT IS AMONG 20 UNBEATEN

Maryland U. Places Chief Hope in Nelson's Passes.

ONE of the country's twenty undefeated teams—and rated by many as one of the ten best in America—moves into Griffith Stadium tomorrow afternoon to help Maryland University stage its biggest football game of the year, a game big enough to bring the Byrdies in from the fastness of their College Park retreat.

Vanderbilt's only setback this year came when it was tied by Tulane, 6-6. Otherwise it has run wild up and down the Southern Conference and is a hot favorite to continue these tactics tomorrow afternoon. The Commodores have ridden over Mercer, 20-7; North Carolina University, 39-7; Western Kentucky, 26-0; Georgia, 12-6, and Georgia Tech, 12-0.

The team boasts two of the outstanding football players in the country, Dixie Roberts, sensational half back, and Bill Leyendecker, 216-pound tackle, both of whom are nominees for All-America renown. Roberts it was who sunk Maryland's great 1931 team by scoring four touchdowns in the second half after Maryland had held the Commodores to 12-12 at the intermission. Leyendecker is impregnable and one of the surest tacklers in the game.

Maryland Pins Hopes On Three Players.

Maryland is depending on three boys, one of them a local product, to make a real game out of it tomorrow. They are Ray Poppelman, line-shattering back whose recent excommunication from the team and eventual reinstatement have been a tonic to him; Earl Widmyer, one of the "fastest humans" and a rapidly improving football player, and Dick Nelson, Tech High product, who is rated the best passer in this region.

The combination of Nelson and Widmyer looms as the most serious threat Maryland can offer tomorrow. The speedy little back has improved daily in the art of catching Nelson's long, fiery passes. Poppelman can not expect the line in front of him to do much in the way of opening holes in the rock-ribbed Vandy front wall.

Maryland plans to unleash all of its trick plays, realizing that it is not quite in Vandy's class on straight football.

Brookland Boys Club Plays Training School

Brookland Boys Club grid team steps out into classy competition tomorrow afternoon when it meets the National Training School, conqueror of many local high school squads. The game will be played at 2 o'clock.

C. U. BEATEN ON ALLEYS.

Southeastern University won its annual athletic contest last night at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys, beating Catholic University, long-standing rival, in easy fashion in a five-man-team bowling match.

Catholic University was represented by Tom Whelan, Buster Sheary, Frankie Fullam, Phil Gross and Lou Epinelli.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

FACED with the possible absence of their coach, Jim Pixlee, George Washington University's football team runs up against serious competition tonight when North Dakota State's unbeaten eleven is encountered under the lights at Griffith Stadium beginning at 8 o'clock.

Pixlee was taken from Griffith Stadium to George Washington University Hospital yesterday, during the final workout of the Colonials, and it was feared at the time that he was stricken with appendicitis, but a thorough examination last night proved that he is in no danger and probably will not have to undergo an operation. It is possible that he will be at the stadium tonight to guide the destinies of his team, but if not his place will be taken by Len Walsh, able assistant.

G. W. Was Scheduled As "Breather."

North Dakota's Bisons, somewhat smaller, but much faster than was expected, arrived late yesterday afternoon and practiced last night under the lights. Casey Finnegan, veteran coach of the team, stated that the Bisons had actually scheduled G. W. as something of a "breather" preliminary to the game against Army next week, but since the defeat of Iowa by George Washington—a victory which Finnegan says was a sensation in the Midwest—he has developed a wholesome respect for the locals.

North Dakota is a Notre Dame system team and from the looks of the squad yesterday packs two of the best football players to be seen in Washington this year—Fritz Hansen, half back, and Bud Jacobsen, end. Hansen is the fastest and shiftiest back

Armour Returns to Capital Today, Seeks Kenwood Open

District Pros Practice for $2,500 Event Next Week; Brightwood Caddies in Annual Tourney Sunday; Allen Wins Title.

DAVE HERMAN.

TOMMY ARMOUR, former American, British and Canadian open champion, will arrive here this morning to launch his practice campaign for the $2,500 National Capital open at Kenwood Golf and Country Club November 12 and 13.

The "Black Scot," as he is familiarly known among the golfing fraternity, will be the guest of his brother, Sandy, at Congressional Country Club, where he served as professional several years ago. Runner-up in the 1931 National Capital open, Armour will be the first of the noted professionals to put in an early appearance. He plans to test out his shots at Kenwood this afternoon and will remain here until the tournament opens next Saturday.

Walter Hagen, one of the ranking favorites, whose entry came in with a flock of other big shots the other day, has indicated that he will arrive with his manager, Bob Harlow, the early part of next week.

District professionals and amateurs, determined to finish among the twelve cash prize winners, opened a practice campaign at Kenwood yesterday. Among those who played around were Al Treder and Harry Pitt, of Manor; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam; Walter Cunningham, of Burning Tree; Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and Al Houghton.

Keen competition is promised in the "champion of champions" golf tournament at Kenwood Saturday. Thirty-six holes are scheduled, with every District club to be represented except Columbia and Burning Tree. Miller B. Stevinson, Columbia champion, will be out of town, while the latter club has no titleholder.

Play will start at 9 o'clock in the morning, with the second eighteen

ISEULT TRIUMPHS OVER STAR JUVENILES AT PIMLICO TRACK

Filly Ridden To Victory By Mills

Mate Scores Handily Over St. Brideaux and Pilate.

By WALTER HAIGHT
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., Nov. 3.—That prominent combination of Jockey Hank Mills and the Wheatley Stable, owned by Ogden Mills and his sister, Mrs. Phipps, prepared the good filly, Iseult, for a crack at the $40,000 added Pimlico Futurity here on Saturday and picked up a purse in the meanwhile.

Iseult, which came down from New York following a stake victory, marched postward today for the Pimlico Homebred in a field of ten lively youngsters and proceeded to show them the way home in a brilliant display of speed and finishing ability. Two lengths behind the winner came Acautaw, Trainer Elmer Trueman's pride, with The Pelican, Widener hope, third, another two lengths away.

Iseult ran the 6 furlongs over a good track in 1:13 and carried the majority of the waging to pay off with a $4.30 mutuel.

Rush Hour Tires Under Weight.

Rush Hour, forced to carry 121 pounds, set the early pace followed by Acautaw and The Pelican, with Iseult far back. Rounding the far turn, the weight told and Rush Hour faded as Iseult, now in high gear, moved up with a rush. In the stretch Iseult went into a two-length lead and Mills hand-rode home.

Ideal autumn weather brought out a crowd in the neighborhood of 10,000—the largest of the meeting.

Mate, Preakness winner and long-time disappointment, showed today that his recent good form is of the clinging type when he ran a smashing race under the guidance of Jockey Steffen to win the fifth by three lengths from St. Brideaux and Pilate. The last-named set the pace to the stretch, but Mate easily made up the ground and galloped to the wire with plenty to spare. St. Brideaux closed with a rush for the place money.

Polar Brush, with Hank Mills in the saddle, came from behind in the stretch to take the opener, a mile and 70 yards test for 2-year-olds. Bushranger, another to finish fast, was second ahead of Judge Judy. Bushranger and Chatterfol battled it out for the lead from the barrier rise to the stretch turn, where the latter sfolded. Bushranger also tired and had little left when Mills brought Polar Brush up on the outside. It was a nose decision and Polar Brush rewarded at a $21.90 mutuel.

Gift Magic Worthy Favorite.

Gift Magic acted like a good favorite in the second race, for juveniles over the same course. Bejshak took the son of Gift Hawk to the front as the field left and made every post a winning one, taking a five-length advantage at one stage. Band Wagon was second all the way, with Brown Molasses third.

The hysteric laughter of the long-shot players greeted the victory of Buck Hero in the third race. Petie Walls brought the gelding home a half length in front of Meeting Place to the tune of a $46.30 mutuel. Third money went to Tazewell. Hacky H. and Meeting Place set the fast early pace, but Buck Hero worked his way up from sixth place on the backstretch to win going away.

The sixth went to Tetrachal, with Celtic Prince, a long shot, second and Autumnal, of the field, third.

C. V. Whitney's Banderlog accounted for the final in a drive with Sunvir and Torealong.

AT THE POST

with Bill Benniags

DEAR AL: PIMLICO RACE TRACK.

You can mark Mate down as a mighty fit horse and it will take a lot of speed to beat him at a distance from now on. The one-time Preakness winner seemed eager to keep going after he breezed home ahead of the field yesterday. St. Brideaux awoke as I said he would and put up a rousing finish. This fellow did go farther, working out a mile and a quarter. Mate, incidentally, made my second winner—Gift Magic was the other. Believe I have some real good things tucked away in this column. Get yours.

Among the trials for tomorrow's Futurity were: Swivel, mile in 1:43; Caterwaul, mile in 1:44 4-5; Dynastic, 6 furlongs in 1:15 2-5; Golden Way, 6 furlongs in 1:16; Old Baldy and Golden, 3 furlongs in 0:36. BILL.

FIRST RACE—HIDEWAY picks up 10 pounds off his victory in the Chevy Chase Handicap at Laurel. That was a nice piece of jumping, and the best he has shown. A performance of that kind here would take the purse. HUFFY is better than that last and still the one to beat. KINGS CRIER for third.

SECOND RACE—WALTER H. turned in a speedy effort to score in New York before being shipped, and now that he is at home in Maryland can be expected to show a smart race. BOLILEE ran well the other day. DAUDET will be hard to keep out of the money.

THIRD RACE—This is a very cheap group, and I believe BLONDISH holds an edge. BROWN SINNER and SIR KENDALL have been trying for a long time and may divide the remainder.

FOURTH RACE — BRIGHT BIRD (yes, I'm on him again) appears to be outclassed in this field. RENAISSANCE, PROTRACTOR and CONTRIBUTE all hold better figues. Still, I'm convinced that the son of Bright Knight can beat these and on a fast track. Possibly today isn't the day, but it can be done. He'll carry by deuce across the board.

FIFTH RACE—WHITE LIES ran a brilliant race at Laurel, though beaten by Tred Avon. Should prove worthy of a win bet here. ILLUSIVE and MR. KHAYYAM for the rest.

SIXTH RACE—WAHOO has worked well and may surprise. This is the spot. MORALIST and FLAG VIEW are the dangerous ones.

SEVENTH RACE—DANCING MACK is improving and can take the measure of BOSCOBEL. Gilbert will have the mount on the top one. GRAND ACRE for the show.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLAR BRUSH, $21.90, $7.80, $5.20; BUSHRANGER, $4.80, $4.10; JUDGE JUDY, $4.90.

POLAR BRUSH, moving his way up on the outside when reaching the back stretch, withstood a strong drive gamely through the final drive and was up in the concluding strides. BUSHRANGER had a lot taken out of him racing CHATTERFOL into defeat, but fought it out with good courage. JUDGE JUDY, well placed early, responded to pressure and colsed gamely. He crowded RESERVIST badly right at the finish. RESERVIST, far back early, came through on the inside during the stretch run and was closing stoutly until interfered with. LORD RAGLAN raced well. CHATTERFOL tired from forcing the pace. SWINHAVEN was pulled up going to the first turn, and was never a factor. PRINCE ABBOT tired.

SECOND RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good from gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 1:35. Off at 1:36½. Winner, W. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GIFT MAGIC, $4.20, $3.10, $3.30; BAND WAGON, $3.30, $2.90; BROWN MOLASSES, $6.40.

GIFT MAGIC, away quickly and sent to the front immediately, was given a breathing spell after moving into a clear lead, responded to pressure and held BAND WAGON safe under steady pressure. BAND WAGON, in closest pursuit of the winner, made a strong effort when straightened into the home stretch, but hung badly in the closing furlong. BROWN MOLASSES, in the thick of contention throughout, could not seriously menace the leaders. STANDOUT closed courageously. ONCE saved ground, but was outrun. ST. OMAR had early speed. PRESAGE took a very wide course the entire trip. SHAPPELL was outrun.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:05. Off at 2:08½. Winner, H. E. BUCK HERO, kept within striking distance of the early leaders, went to the outside entering home room end, flashing his field with good speed. MEETING PLACE down and was under severe urging at the end. MEETING PLACE followed HACKY H. closely, displaced the latter when leaving the back stretch, saved ground and held on well. TAZEWELL worked his way up on the outside and closed gamely. COLOSSAL, forwardly placed, made a strong effort on the final turn, but tired in the stretch thereafter. ANGRY LASS closed fast from a slow beginning. SKIRT could not threaten the leaders. BLACK PRINCESS had no excuses. FAIR BILL was outrun. HACKY H. stopped badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. The Pimlico Home Bred. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:48½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISEULT, $4.30, $3.20, $2.80; ACAUTAW, $6.70, $4.80; THE PELICAN, $5.70.

ISEULT, on the outside of the leaders and close up, gained rapidly when midway of the turn, shook off the pacemakers and held ACAUTAW perfectly safe. Latter, vigorously handled and a stout factor, raced RUSH HOUR and THE PELICAN into submission and then continued gamely. THE PELICAN, rushed hard to hold a forward position entering the stretch run when home pegan tiring. KNIGHTSBRIDGE was unable to menace the leaders at any stage. JUNGLE KING had no mishaps. LIQUEUR, well placed, tired at the end. RUSH HOUR stopped. HELL DIVER went extremely wide and raced in dull fashion.

FIFTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. All ages. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:23. Winner, A. C. Bostwick's ch. c. MATE, outrun his field to the first turn and was taken under restraint when PILATE moved up to close up also, coming around the pacemaker wide n ready, drew out smartly in the closing furlong. ST. BRIDEAUX, following the pace closely, held on winningly when the rear test came. PILATE took command when entering the back stretch, supplied good pace, but faltered fast during the final drive. TETRACHAL, squeezed back when the break came, was sent into contention steadily, circled his field and, finishing resolutely, wore the leaders down rapidly during the stretch run. CELTIC PRINCE, prominent the entire trip, shook off BRAVE AND BOLD, but could not resist the winner. AUTUMNAL, fractious at the post, broke from the outside and showed a good test all the way. BRAVE AND BOLD, used up racing ROYAL PAST into submission, faltered when kept in the softer footing next the inner rail during the stretch run. ROYAL PAST had good speed for five furlongs. ALLANAH was easily best of the others. FORGIE had brief speed. WOODCRAFT raced in dull fashion.

BANDERLOG, moving into command at once, was steadied in front, responded cheerfully when put to a drive and outstayed SUNVIR. Latter, forced wide at the first turn, secured racing room between MODERN TIMES and UNENCUMBERED when entering the back stretch, made a determined effort to overtake the winner entering the home stretch, but was not good enough. TOREALONG, slow to get going, reached contention rapidly and finished with good speed. WRACKELL, on the outside all the way, finished gamely. MISS CORINNE and MARCASITE were outrun. MODERN TIMES and UNENCUMBERED stopped when put to a drive.

WESTERN VS. EASTERN IN SERIES

Even Battle Expected in Clash for 2d Place Today.

WHAT should be the best game of the high school series, from a spectators standpoint, will be played at Wilson Stadium this afternoon when Eastern and Western get together for their annual game.

The pair will be fighting for the rather hollow honors of second place.

Eastern will present a revamped line-up, one that in Coach Guyon's opinion should give the team an added punch. Such a punch was lacking in the Tech game. Gus Kiatta, a youngster packing plenty of beef, will be seen at right guard, and Joe Howard has ousted Lewis from the center job.

In the back field Kenny Wade, who appeared to have a lock on his halfback berth, has been displaced by "Zip" Adams. Adams is small, but his willingness and ability to squeeze through tight places won the job.

Keegin Ready for Action.

Joe Keegin, half back, who was ineligible during the first semester, will be ready today and he may see action before the game is very old. Keegin is the type of ball carrier that can smash into the line and skirt the ends equally well. Fast and shifty on his feet he also possesses a sound football head and his anticipation of opponent's plays is uncanny.

Western's hopes rest with the same dozen players who hoisted its colors to victory over Central and later lost to Tech by one touchdown. The big Red line looks a trifle better than that of its rival, but in the back field Eastern boasts a slight edge.

Western has a couple of all-high prospects and they can be expected to play their best game of the season, as the fray marks the team's final appearance in the 1932 series.

Leo Hilleary, Jack Lynham, Turk Teeham and Reds Reynolds comprise Dan Ahern's probable starting line-up. Jimmy Corcoran will be ready to enter the fray should his services be necessary.

In the line Krause and Buscher, tackles, loom as the outstanding players. The pair have acquitted themselves with honors in past games and it is safe to say Quarter Back Joe Mills will not send any blue-jerseyed ball toters in their direction.

Stocks Three-Tenths Down; Gold Issues Stage Advance

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Stocks lived at something of a compromise in the late market today after a desultory sag during the greater part of another slow session.

Closing price changes were irregular and narrow. Stocks' ability to hold above the average October 10 lows was open to favorable interpretation, although just how strong the resistance really was, could hardly be determined in a turnover of only 1,021,150 shares.

Gold mining issues gleamed brightly. This group made one of those periodic sallies that frequently follow declining commodity prices. Homestake was the headliner, climbing to a record high at 152 and closing 16½ points to the good. McIntyre Porcupine, Alaska Juneau and Dome also participated in the move, although unspectacularly.

Otherwise, the day's trading was cut to familiar cloth—a little early firmness, then an equally mild reaction and finally some leisurely covering. Net changes for United States Steel, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Standard of New Jersey, Du Pont, American Tobacco "B," Santa Fe, New York Central, Consolidated Gas and numerous others were fractional, although the downs predominated in the averages. Case was an exception to the general rule, closing 2 points off.

Trade news was colorless. The General Motors regular dividend apparently had been expected and exerted to effect marketwise. Early estimates of last week's car loadings mentioned a decrease, perhaps of some proportions, although a seasonal decline is to be expected.

Hog Prices Cut Lowest In 34 Years at Buffalo

East Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Hog prices sank to the lowest levels in 34 years today as live animals sold to Buffalo packers at $3.50 a hundredweight.

Checking back over their records dealers found this was the lowest price since 1898 when porkers sold in Buffalo at $3.25 and $3.30 a hundredweight.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

LONDON—Further profit-taking by speculators eased gilt-edged securities on the stock exchange and despite the success of the new loan they closed easy. Industrials and Paris favorites improved on good buying while transatlantic issues were inclined to rally. The closing was steady.

PARIS—The appreciable recovery in rentes on the bourse offset the unfavorable effect of yesterday's Wall street reports. Prices improved at the opening but trading then calmed. International issues also improved and the closing was well sustained.

BERLIN—Prices on the boerse declined 1 to 3 points due to the Berlin street car strike and internal political developments. The closing was a shade better but business was stagnant.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

What the Stock Market Did

	Thurs.	Wed.
Advances	98	50
Declines	336	428
Unchanged	168	105
Total issues traded	602	583

Stocks.

Trading reached a sort of compromise in late sales, with prices firming after a narrow range of losses. Declines averaged three-tenths of a point. The turnover was 1,021,150 shares. Gold mining issues staged a vigorous advance. Trade news was colorless.

Bonds.

The market sagged under the weight of uncertainties. Trading volume dwindled to $7,262,000, and losses averaged four-tenths of a point. Very little selling pressure was apparent. Issues dealt in numbered 635 out of 1,500 listed on the exchange. From October 1 the loss to date averaged 5 points. Rails displayed the heaviest tone.

Curb.

A steady selling drive sent curb prices lower. The list showed numerous fractional losses, and extreme declines of 4 to 5 points. The volume of trading remained at 150,000 shares, but dealing included a larger number of issues. Utilities were generally steady. Some oil investments gained. Mining shares advanced.

Wheat.

Canada and Argentina vied in export sales of wheat, and news of huge shipments and other features of world competition sent Chicago prices to low levels of all time. Canada was reported to have sold overseas 2,000,000 bushels. Other grains followed the decline. December wheat closed at 42½ to 42½ cents.

Cotton.

Prices wilted slightly on a fair volume of business. Buying on dips, or down-scale trends, formed a large part of dealing. The market sagged 1 to 3 points. December sold at 6.00, after a slump to 5.98. Liverpool reported trade calling and hedging.

BOND MARKET SAGS ON SMALLER SALES

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The bond market again sagged under the weight of uncertainties today, although trading volume dwindled and little selling pressure was apparent.

Of the approximate 1,500 issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, transfers in only 635 were recorded in the day's proceedings, sales totaled $7,262,000, par value, a moderate drop from yesterday's aggregate. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans declined four-tenths of a point. From the first of October, this average is off about 5 points.

As in recent sessions, the secondary rails displayed the heaviest of tone. Even such bonds as Santa Fe General and adjustment 4s, Canadian National 5s, Delaware & Hudson convertible 5s and Union Pacific refunding 5s shaded their prices.

Both the utilities and industrials were heavy. American I. G. Chemical 5½s were off 6 points, while declines of around a point were suffered by some issues of American & Foreign Power, Columbia Gas, Goodyear, International Hydroelectric, Laclede Gas, Purity Bakery, Richfield Oil, Shell Union Oil, Utilities Power & Light and Western Union. Warner Sugar 4½s dropped 4¾. Remington Rand 5½s were off 3 and Montana Power debenture 5s lost 6 points.

The Argentines were the weakest of the foreign section, losing from 1 to 2½ points. The Germans were comparatively steady while small gains were recorded by bonds of Great Britain, Italy, France, Norway and Japan.

The United States Government list was slightly easier with some of the Treasuries fairly active.

Industrial Fancies Yielding To Facts, Noted Briton Says

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—An era of pleasant industrial fancies in the opinion of the Viscount Bearsted, prominent British industrialist and financier, is giving way to one of solid but more sustaining facts.

Lord Bearsted, chairman of the Powerful "Shell" Transport & Trading Co., Ltd., and a director of many other corporations, is visiting the United States for the first time in three years and has been conferring quietly with leading financiers in New York. He is returning to England tomorrow on the Aquitania.

While reluctant to discuss in detail the outlook for the petroleum industry, he said that he was "not at all cownhearted" and had hopes of oil smoothing the way for an ultimate revival in world trade.

Stressing the importance of cooperation in the battle for recovery, Lord Bearsted said:

"I should like to compare the present position of the oil industry with that of the world in general, with one major difference, namely, that the various units in the petroleum field have already reached a measure of cooperation which bids fair to place the industry in a better position than it has been for several years past and make it the first to rise superior to present conditions by recognizing these conditions rather than by awaiting a change.

"We have so far only made a beginning and there is still a great deal to accomplish. In common with all other industries, we were misled by the mirage of a post-war prosperity and equipped ourselves to deal with conditions which have proved ephemeral. We have swallowed this hard fact and are sitting down today to reconstitute the industry in the light of existing things, trying to shape the industry to present demands rather than to present supply.

"I am confident that the good will which has been shown in the working out of some constructive measure of amelioration will reap its reward in the not far distant future and that the better understanding of each other's problems has led to greatly increased fellowship among those responsible."

Lord Bearsted would not say whether another international petroleum conference was contemplated or whether his visit to New York might have some bearing on efforts to reach an agreement for the further proration of world output.

"I just came over to take a look at the American situation," said he. "I hadn't been here for such a long time that I thought it might be well to get my facts at first hand, for a change."

Steel Ingot Output Up to 20 Per Cent

Automobile Plant Orders Increase Capacity; Pig Iron Advances.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Iron Age said today that although new steel business had declined, ingot production had risen a point, to 20 per cent of capacity, chiefly because of orders from the automobile industry.

October pig iron output, on a daily basis, gained 5.3 per cent over September and the average for last month was 21.5 per cent higher than the low point of August.

Many buyers are awaiting the outcome of the election before making further commitments, the review asserted. The broad outlook "is fairly encouraging for further moderate gains, considering that railroad equipment programs are becoming more numerous.

CURB SINKS LOWER ON STEADY SELLING

Extreme Declines Reached 5 Points on Volume of 150,000 Shares.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—A steady drizzle of selling caused stocks to seek a firmer footing at lower price levels in today's curb market, and the list showed numerous losses of fractions to a point with extreme losses of 4 or 5 points.

Transfers totaled 150,000 shares, the same as yesterday, but a somewhat greater number of securities was traded in, although on the whole, trading remained apathetic.

Electric Bond & Share common bore the brunt of selling, and was carried below 20 at one time, but lost only a fraction net. The 6 per cent preferred was more vulnerable, dropping 5 points on small turnover.

Other utilities were generally steady. American Gas & Electric, American Superpower and Niagara Hudson Power were fractionally lower. Cities Service and United Light & Power "A" were unchanged. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore edged upward a fraction.

Gulf and Standard of Indiana were fractionally higher. The rapidly shifting Humble Oil quotation was off a point, however, in small dealings.

Deere and the Swift issues were a shade lower. Great Atlantic & Pacific dropped 4 points. Newmont Mining recovered nearly a point, following its sharp reaction of yesterday.

Italy Boosts Subsidies To Support Ship Lines

Rome, Italy, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Increased subsidies in later years are provided in an agreement between the Italia Line of ships and the government, published officially today, providing for operation of liners from Genoa to Central and South America and to Australia until 1942.

Increases of 13,000,000 lire (about $650,000) are provided annually from 1937 to 1940 and of 6,000,000 for the following year.

WHEAT HITS BOTTOM ON EXPORT REPORTS

Canada and Argentina Vie for Sales Abroad; Other Grains Decline.

Chicago, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—With Canada and Argentina running neck and neck to sell surplus wheat ahead of other countries, grain values everywhere fell to historic new depths today.

Canadian export sales of wheat today were estimated at as much as 2,000,000 bushels, with overseas purchases of United States wheat reduced to zero. In Chicago, successive outbursts of orders to stop losses plunged wheat down to 41⅞ a bushel for December contracts, a price hitherto unparalleled, with traders disturbed over fresh setbacks in British exchange rates as well as by unexpected reappearance of Russia as a wheat exporter on a large scale.

An outstanding feature of intensified world competition was the fact that prices for Argentine wheat shipped to Europe were slashed today 2⅝ cents.

Chicago Wheat Shaky.

Closing quotations for wheat in Chicago were shaky at but slightly above the day's bottom, 1 cent to 1⅝ cents under yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ lower; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ down, and provisions 5 to 10 cents up.

Wheat and corn both smashed low price records today the moment business began, all futures deliveries of the two reaching new bottoms. The chief immediate reason was a drop of 3 points in British exchange rates, together with radically cheaper offerings of Argentine wheat abroad and word of increased quantities of breadstuffs being plied up in European continental ports, especially Antwerp and Rotterdam. It was also shown that wheat shipments from the Black Sea region, mainly Russia, had suddenly expanded to almost 2,000,000 bushels.

Before the day was ended, news was at hand that the Berlin government had planned a quota system on wheat imports and other agricultural products to avert a collapse of Germany's marketing system. Meanwhile, estimates that world exportable supplies of wheat at present were 110,000,000 bushels over and above probable requirements of importing countries put a further strain on values. Despite persistent recurrence of atop-loss orders, a dearth of buying power rather than unusual pressure to sell characterized the market as a whole.

Corn and oats although temporarily sympathizing with wheat weakness rallied later owing to active shipping demand for corn, including some export business.

Provisions reflected upturns of hog values.

Copper Prices Decline; Buyers Still Apathetic

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The price of copper dropped to a slightly lower level in the export market today with the posting of 5.17½ to 5.20 cents a pound. Previously the metal was quoted at 5.25 cents.

Consumers continue to show little interest either here or abroad. On the other side the Katanga interests of Belgium were said to be quoting the lower levels, with American producers offering at the equivalent to 5.20 cents. Domestic copper remains at 5.25 cents a pound.

At present 1,500 are employed, compared with 8,000 when the plant is at full capacity.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Simms Petroleum Co. has notified the New York Stock Exchange of a proposed reduction in the authorized capital stock to 500,000 shares, from 1,000,000.

RESERVE BANKS ADD $9,000,000 CREDITS

Total Advances for Week $2,228,000,000; Bills Up $4,000,000.

(Associated Press.)

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended November 2, was reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Banks, as $2,228,000,000.

This was an increase of $9,000,000 over the preceding week and of $54,000,000 compared with the corresponding period last year.

On November 2 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,226,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $32,000,000 in money in circulation and $10,000,000 in unexpended capital funds, nonmember deposits, &c., offset in part by a decrease of $28,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and increases of $9,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, adjusted.

Holdings of discounted bills increased $3,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland and $4,000,000 at all Federal Reserve banks. The system's holdings of bills bought in open market and of United States securities were practically unchanged.

New York Central Car Loadings 4,501 Less

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The New York Central system handled 92,618 cars of revenue freight in the week ended October 29, compared with 97,119 in the previous week. Several other carriers also reported smaller loadings.

Movements at St. Louis terminal, representing interchanges by 28 connecting lines, aggregated 27,810 cars last week, compared with 30,550. Missouri Pacific was down to 23,043 cars from 24,655; St. Louis San Francisco to 14,637 from 15,783; Wabash to 11,911 from 13,059, and Missouri-Kansas-Texas to 8,315 from 8,971. On the other hand, International-Great Northern and Gulf Coast Lines reported moderate increases.

Cocoa Shipments Increase.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Cocoa October shipments from the Gold Coast were reported at 16,892 tons compared with 5,598 for the same month last year. This represents the largest October total for the last five years. In September the shipments totaled 8,124 tons.

COTTON PRICES CUT ON MODERATE SALES

Dip-Buying Accounted for Volume; Market Down 1 to 3 Points.

New York, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—While a fair volume of business was reported in cotton today, orders appeared to be evenly divided and prices fluctuated within a narrow range. Buying was mostly on the dips, or scale-down orders, however, and prices made new low ground for the movement with December selling off to 5.99 or at the lowest level touched since early last August, when it sold at 5.98. That delivery closed at 6.00. The general market was off 1 to 3 points net.

The opening was unchanged to 3 points higher in response to steady cables and trade buying. Houses with Liverpool connections bought here. Bulges met renewed liquidation or Southern selling, and the lowest levels were reached by most positions in the late trading. March sold off to 6.13, a net decline of 3 points, and closed at that figure.

The weather was considered generally favorable for the movement, but according to reports reaching here from the South the spot basis was firm with business quiet. Another private crop report was issued placing the indicated yield at 11,399,000 compared with an end-September indication of 11,099,000 by the same authorities.

Liverpool cables reported trade calling and covering with hedging less active in that market and said there was an optimistic tone in Manchester on expectations of an early settlement of the Lancashire labor troubles. Big Dividend Cited In Eaton Charges

"More Than 300 Per Cent" Paid Founders, Witness Tells Court.

Baltimore, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—An accountant testified in Circuit Court here today that dividends of "more than 300 per cent" a year was paid by Continental Shares, Inc., to Cyrus S. Eaton and his associates on $10,000 of "founders" stock.

Mr. Eaton was formerly president of Continental Shares, a Cleveland investment trust, capitalized in Maryland at $112,000,000. George L. Gugle, of Columbus, Ohio, a stockholder, has brought suit to have a receiver appointed.

The accountant, R. E. Warren, said that more than $325,000 dividends were paid on the $10,000 stock. His statement about the "founders" stock came after he had testified that the dividend rates on common and preferred stock ranged between 6 and 8 per cent. The total paid in dividends to stockholders was more than $9,000,000. Continental Shares was formed in 1926.

BALTIMORE LIQUOR SUSPECT QUIZZED IN BLEINBERGER DEATH

Isadore Malinow Questioned in Connection With Pike Gun Battle.

Isadore Malinow, arrested last Friday on charges of carrying deadly weapons and several traffic counts, was rearrested yesterday in Baltimore on a prohibition charge, and became a suspect in the Columbia pike gun battle, in which Elmer Bleinberger was wounded fatally.

He is being held in lieu of $5,000 bail, on a charge of selling five gallons of liquor July 8. State police indicated, however, that if he should provide bond on the prohibition count they would ask that a detainer be placed against him while they and Baltimore detectives investigate further his possible connection with the Bleinberger shooting.

Bleinberger was put into a taxicab on Randolph street northwest, and taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died the following day.

The linking of Malinow in the case followed a conference yesterday between Julius Wosch, Ellicott City chief of police; Lieut. Ruxton Ridgley, of the State police, and Capt. Charles H. Burns, of the Baltimore Detective Bureau. Capt. Burns assigned Detective Lieuts. James Comen and Lee Vogelsang to aid the other officers in their investigation.

The party set out soon thereafter in quest of certain members of a gang in which Bleinberger, also known as "Eel," belonged, with headquarters, according to the police, in the vicinity of Greenmount avenue and Eager street, in Baltimore.

They returned about an hour later with a suspect, whom they questioned for some time and then released—without revealing his identity.

Malinow's first arrest was the culminatpn of a downtown chase in Baltimore by prohibition investigators, which ended at Calvert and Lexington streets, when Malinow ran his automobile into another machine.

A shotgun and a pistol were found in the car, but the dry agents could find no liquor. Patrolman John Zalder arrested Malinow on charges of carrying deadly weapons, driving without an operator's card and reckless driving.

School Fare Hearing In Court Is Delayed

Owing to the priority of other cases, the hearing in the District Supreme Court on the injunction suit brought by local utilities companies to set aside the 3-cent fare for school children in the District was delayed yesterday. It probably will not be reached before Monday.

Charles M. Dolle, executive director of the National Council of Catholic Men, will appear as an associate counsel against the injunction. He entered the case at the request of Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore, who is interested on account of parochial children who would be affected.

DRIVER AND VICTIM HURT IN 2 CRASHES

Man on Way to Hospital Is Hit by Car Which Later Is Wrecked in Flight.

It probably could be characterized as poetic justice, retribution, irony of fate, or something of the kind.

Samuel Lonsbury, 61, of 3033 Sixteenth street northwest, was on his way to Emergency Hospital yesterday afternoon to see his sick wife. At Seventeenth and F streets northwest, a block from the hospital, he was struck by an alleged hit-and-run driver. He suffered deep cuts and bruises, and was taken into the hospital for treatment.

When he saw the car speed away from the scene of the accident, J. H. Burt, of Alexandria, Va., gave chase. At Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue the fleeing car collided with the automobile of George M. Wright, of 4574 Conduit road northwest.

Jumping from his car, the alleged hit-and-run driver is said to have attempted to continue his flight on foot, but stumbled and fell on his head.

When questioned by police, the man first gave his name as Albert Jones, but later said it was George J. Osan, and gave his address as 803 Seventeenth street southeast. He was charged with fleeing from the scene of an accident, reckless driving, and driving without a permit.

Farrell Stresses U. S. Foreign Trade

The importance of the revival of foreign trade as an element of national and international economic recovery was emphasized last night by James A. Farrell, former president of the United States Steel Corporation, who is conducting a seminar on foreign trade at the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

"National must be placed above purely private interests," he said. "Conversely, individual advantage will best result from community welfare."

The seminar is being conducted with 25 advanced students in attendance. Mr. Farrell was introduced to the group by Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of the university.

Erstwhile Foe Will Decorate Soldier Tomb

Capt. Erwin Wassner, who commanded a submarine flotilla during the World War, with two fellow officers and Rudolph Leitner, counselor of the German Embassy, will lay a wreath on the white marble slab.

Capt. Wassner is in command of the German cruiser Karlsruhe, which steamed into the port of Philadelphia yesterday—the first time it had touched the shore of the United States since the World War.

The Karlsruhe is the training ship of the German Navy. It will be at Philadelphia a week before continuing on its world-girdling training cruise. There were 531 officers and cadets aboard.

TRAFFIC TOLL

Police personnel have been instructed to devote more attention to the enforcement of the traffic regulation regarding motor vehicles passing street car stops.

Taking cognizance of police court judges' recent indication that they intend to pass severer sentences on such violators, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown yesterday issued orders to the force, charging them with greater alertness in this direction.

Deaths from accidents this year continued to exceed last year's by 38, injuries by 211, while accidents this year to date have been 414 less than last year during the same period. The figures are:

Traction Valuation Report to Be Delayed

The street railway valuations, which were scheduled to be completed by the Public Utilities Commission by the end of November, will not be finished before December, possibly the latter part, Riley E. Elgin, vice chairman in charge of valuation work, said yesterday.

The job of evaluating the street car companies has been under way for more than two years. About a month ago the special staff of experts was reduced to a single engineer and an assistant. Minor details have delayed the final work on the preliminary figures.

John M. Branham, of Gallatin, Tenn., was elected president of the National Fox Hunters Association at the annual meeting held last night at the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department.

The meeting concluded a day which had seen the finals of the field trials in the Futurity and the first cast of the All Age stakes.

While members awaited the decision of the field judges as to the winning dog in the Futurity, they gathered for the annual meeting. Announcement of the winner was expected late last night.

Other officers elected at the meeting were A. G. Rolfe, of Washington, first vice president, and L. B. Shouse, of Lexington, Ky., second vice president. A secretary-treasurer and a board of directors also will be selected.

HIMMELFARB FINDS HOLY LAND ESCAPED DEPRESSION PERILS

Washington Zionists Select Spigler as President for Second Time.

Outlining a recent trip though various European countries, including the Holy Land, at a meeting of the Washington Zionists in the Jewish Community Center last night, Paul Himmelfarb of the executive committee of the organization pointed out that of all the countries he visited be found that Palestine was the least affected by the world-wide depression.

To give added stress to his statement the speaker said that some of the people were not even aware of the fact that there was a depression going on. As is the case in other countries, the people of Palestine apparently were not wanting for food and other necessities of life, he said.

Other speakers included Judge Milton Strasburger, who recalled the first meetings of the Zionists back in 1917; and Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court, who spoke on the history of the organization.

New officers were elected. They are Louis Spigler, president; Mrs. John Safer and Isadore Hirshfield, vice presidents; Samuel Freedman, treasurer, and Sylvia Rosenfeld, secretary. Charles J. Stein, John M. Safer, I. Joseph Mayo, Paul Himmelfarb, Rabbi Solemen Metz, Barnard Danzansky, Arthur Gottlieb and others were elected to the executive committee.

The new president, a prominent local attorney, in accepting the office for the second time in three years, pledged a successful administration with the cooperation and support of the members.

LIGHTS IN CUPOLA, CITIZENS' NEW AIM

Press and Various Groups Thanked for Cooperation in Restoration Drive.

Pleased from their success in obtaining restoration of the cupola on the new Taft School, now under construction, the Burroughs Citizens Association last night voted to ask the District Engineer Commissioner to provide illumination for the architectural adornment.

Members of the association explained they wished the cupola lighted while meetings and other events are in progress in the school to signify that community activities are taking place.

Resolutions were adopted thanking The Post and other newspapers for favorable publicity during the campaign in interest of the cupola. The District Commissioners were congratulated on "their wise decision" and the National Commission of Fine Arts, the American Institute of Architects and the Board of Education also were thanked for cooperation.

Henry Gilligan, Board of Education member, congratulated the association on its success in having the cupola plans restored. The association decided to give the model cupola which appeared on a float of the association in the Halloween parade to the Burroughs School.

Criticism was made of the use of imported labor on the Taft School and the Commissioners will be asked to restrict school building construction in future to local employment. L. M. Eidsness declared the Commissioners were throwing a burden on the Community Chest by depriving Washington men of jobs.

Quiz in Reporter's Death Due Today

Police Seeking Bootlegger Who Is Said to Have Called on Bradley.

Circumstances surrounding the death Wednesday of James B. Bradley, 24-year-old Washington Times reporter, will be laid before a coroner's jury this morning at the District Morgue.

An autopsy performed yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, deputy coroner, indicates that the wound in Bradley's head was inflicted at close range. Dr. MacDonald voiced the opinion the shot was fired by Bradley. Meanwhile detectives sought to question a bootlegger who was reported to have delivered two bottles of gin at Bradley's apartment on the night of the shooting.

Robert L. Hamilton, James H. Wells and Joseph K. Simmons, friends of Bradley, who attended a party at his apartment on the evening of the shooting, were questioned again yesterday, and will appear voluntarily at the inquest today.

ORDER TO REGULATE UTILITY EXPANSION

New Rule to Require Permit for All Major Improvements to Plants.

An order specifically requiring all local public utilities to apply for permission to make any major plant improvement will be issued by the Public Utilities Commission as soon as it can be drafted by William A. Roberts, special counsel, according to announcement yesterday by Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman.

The order is particularly directed at the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to Gen. Patrick, although Riley E. Elgin, vice chairman, insisted that such was not the case. Mr. Elgin said that there was some doubt among the utilities as to the effectiveness of a section of the public utility act requiring gas and electric corporations to obtain permission of the commission before starting any major construction.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. obtained the commission's approval before starting the Buzzards Point power plant though there was some question about the necessity of making such an application. The Washington Gas Light Co. asked the utilities body for permission to erect a gas holder recently.

As the act does not specify the telephone company, the latter has never sought permission to build exchanges or make plant improvements.

The commission is now engaged in a bitter legal battle with the telephone company over an ordered reduction of 10 per cent in rates. By means of the new order the utilities body will be able to prevent any undue construction by the telephone company in order to increase its valuation for the purpose of blocking rate reductions. Appeals may be made, however, from the order.

During the current year the telephone company will add $1,500,000 to its valuation chiefly by installation of dial equipment.

BITTER FIGHT SEEN ON RATIFICATION OF WARDMAN AUCTION

Evidence that ratification of the auction sale of the Wardman real estate properties two weeks ago will be hotly opposed in the District Supreme Court was seen yesterday when attorneys acting for minority groups of note holders appeared before Justice F. Dickinson Letts and began the introduction of voluminous testimony.

Nine properties of the Wardman Co. were auctioned off for $2,800,000 over the trusts on the buildings, which were in excess of $4,000,000. The terms of the sale required that it be ratified by the District Supreme Court, and that is the requirement by which the minority note holders hope to eventually block the sale.

Attorneys Leslie Garnett, W. Bissell Thomas and William B. O'Connell took the leading part yesterday in outlining to Justice Letts, who is sitting as an equity court, just what they hope to show him as a basis for their contention that the sale for the stated price was far less than the assesed values of the properties and was not equitable.

The attorneys showed that the assessed valuation of the buildings was approximately four times what they brought in the sale. For the trustees under the mortgage that was foreclosed, Attorney John J. Hamilton appeared to urge ratification of the sale.

The issue over which the controversy arose was an $11,000,000 first and refunding bond issue negotiated by the Halsey, Stuart Co., of Chicago, three of whose officials and the company itself are under indictment in connection with the sale of the bonds in Milwaukee. At that time the banking firm showed an appraised valuation of the buildings at $28,000,000.
